AQUATIC

SCHOLES WON HIS HEAT.

Henley, July 6.—In the semi-finals for the Diamond Sculls to-day L. F. Scholes, of the Don Rowing Club, Toronto, beat F. S. Kelly, the holder.

Later, the main attraction on the regatta program to-day was the meeting between L. F. Scholes, of the Don Rowing Club, Toronto, and F. S. Kelly, Oxtan, in the semi-final for the Diamond Sculls, in which the Canadian sculler defeated Kelly, the holder of the trophy, by four lengths, in nine minutes and eleven seconds.

Kelly led for a mile, when the Canadian, putting on a splendid spurt, gradually wore out his opponent, and rowed him down. Opposite the grand stand the Oxtan was exhausted, and stopped. The winner met with a great reception.

His success was quite unexpected, the expert almost unanimously having foretold a victory for Kelly. Scholes struggled over the line much distressed. Kelly was unable to row his boat off the course, and was drifting fainting into a launch.

To-morrow Scholes and Clough, of the London Rowing Club, meet in the final, while the Winnipeg will contest in the final for the Steward Cup with Third Trinity, Cambridge.

From a social viewpoint the regatta to-day was a great success, immense throngs of people being present.

GREAT REJOICING AT TORONTO.

Toronto, July 6.—There was great rejoicing in local rowing circles this morning at the announcement by cable that Lou Scholes, of Toronto, had defeated Kelly, the Australian, in the semi-final at Henley for the Diamond Sculls. There seems to be no doubt entertained here now but that Scholes will win the final, as Kelly has been looked on as his strongest opponent.

Three SUPREME CYCLE SENSATIONS.

Including "Cyclone" Sealing "The Devil's Chimney" Awheel.

The coming to Chatham on Saturday, July 9, of the United Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Great Shows recall to mind the fact that they were the first, and are practically the still the only ones to make the bicycle a tangible big feature by paying fabulously fat salaries to encourage its popularity and dexterity in its use.

All the professional performing cyclists of the past made their debut and won popularity in the eyes of this noted aggregation, to be this season surpassed and superseded by the new and phenomenal leaders in their time, including Prodigious Porties, who makes a bike leap across a chasm fifty feet in width; Diavolo, who loops the loop on a bicycle, and "Cyclone" a recent foreign find, carded as a cycling paradox. Try to walk around the walls of your parlor with your body parallel to the floor and you may get some idea of what he accomplishes at every performance, in riding and rising on an absolutely perpendicular line up the circular inside of "The Devil's Chimney," the diameter of which is less than twelve feet, within which restricted space he is compelled to generate the tremendous force and to acquire sufficient speed for the accomplishment of a feat, which, before his appearance, would have been pronounced a sheer impossibility. At a superficial glance, "The Wild Wheel Whirl" act, introduced by the show in question at Madison Square Garden, New York, might appear almost identical with that of "Cyclone," but when it is considered that its performers were aided by a slanting circular track, while he starts from the ground straight up, it can be seen that the difference in the two performances is essentially as phenomenal as that represented by a walk up hill and one up a perpendicular precipice.

With the arrival of the militia at Sydney the strike leaders have given orders that no more attempts be made to prevent men going to work in the steel works.

THE YOUNG VULTURE

HE IS WILLING TO FIGHT BEFORE
HE IS ABLE TO FLY.

The fledgeling has wonderful strength of bill, is courageous and aggressive and is as quick almost as a flash of lightning.

In the south there is one bird which everybody knows whether he is a nature student or not. I refer to the turkey vulture, or turkey buzzard, as most people call him. This bird seems to be an ever present feature of the southern landscape, for look upward when you will you may see him sweeping the sky with outspread wings, wheeling in broad circles or soaring in graceful spirals, with seeming never a stroke of the mighty pinions for hours at a time.

One day I saw a vulture sailing thus, says Ernest Harold Baynes in the Boston Herald, and I carefully marked his flight until he descended near the white clouds and disappeared near the edge of a distant wood. Supposing that he had come down to feed on some carrion—a dead horse perhaps, which had been dragged just outside of the woods and left—I made the best of my way to the spot where I lost sight of the bird, that I might be a witness to the feast.

I arrived at the wood, but neither bird nor carcass could I see. Then I bethought me that this was the month of May, and that perhaps the buzzard had a nest thereabout. I hunted under the bushes along the side of fallen trees and in some old stumps which were standing near, but not a feather was to be seen.

Presently I spied a log which lay somewhat apart in the shadow of some shrubs, and as I approached it out from somewhere came a big turkey buzzard, which quickly disappeared behind the trees. On coming up to the log, which was a large one, I found that it was hollow, and in the cavity there were two eggs, which doubtless belonged to the vulture which had just departed. They were considerably larger than the eggs of a domestic hen, and in color they were dirty white, heavily spotted with chocolate brown. I left them that I might have an opportunity to study the young.

The next time I visited the hollow log the parent birds were not in sight, but in the nest I found two downy fledglings, which could scarcely be called pretty. They were in every way less attractive than young hawks of the same age. They expressed their disapproval of my presence by a weak growling sound.

I could not visit the spot again for some weeks, and when I did one of them had disappeared. The other was no longer in the hollow log, but standing at a little distance, and I was interested to see the change in his appearance. In the first place, he had grown tremendously; the down which had formerly covered the whole body was now confined chiefly to the head, neck and under parts, and the rest of the bird was clothed with firm black feathers. He looked fat and well fed.

I reached out my hand and caught him by one wing. But here he had a surprise for me, for he seized my finger in his hooked bill and with a turn of his head twisted off a bit of the flesh before I had time even to object. After hurriedly cleansing the wound I again advanced on the enemy, who was game enough to satisfy any one and came to the attack with open bill. Of course he was not dangerous in the least, for he was very young and could not even fly, but for a fledgeling the grip he could give with his bill was astonishing.

However, I picked him up, took him home and tethered him in the garden with a strap to one leg. The first night he ate a good meal of liver, and after that he took almost any kind of meat that was given him. I let him have carrion whenever it was convenient, but at other times he ate freshly killed frogs, fresh beef, opossum and even fish.

One night soon after I had brought him home I went out to see how he looked when he was asleep. It was so dark that his black plumage was not visible against the grass. All I could see of him was a white spot, his head, as it hung near the ground. I approached very quietly and was within five feet when something happened. Out of the darkness there came a flash of white straight toward me with a speed which caused me to step quickly backward, and at the same instant there was a startling, rustling sound, accompanied by a guttural growl, which for a moment I did not recognize as the voice of the young vulture.

Altogether it was a most startling phenomenon, and, although I realized in a moment that the bird was in some way the cause of it, I do not know even yet just what happened. This much I know, however, that the bird rushed at me, growling with all his might, and that the flash of white was the white down of the body uncovered by the opening of the black wings.

The rushing sound was, I think, caused in some way by the wing feathers or tail feathers, or both, but whether by dragging them along the ground, or otherwise I cannot tell. I tried on several occasions to find this out by approaching the young vulture when there was just light enough for me to see what happened, but he would never act in just the same way unless it was quite dark.

No doubt this is some provision of nature to protect the bird when it is young and helpless, and I can testify that it is a good one, for I am sure that few night prowling animals would care to pursue their investigations after being given so startling a reception.

A SAFF STORY.

Mrs. Margaret Thompson of London, who died many years ago, by her will directed that in her coffin should be buried all her handkerchiefs and sufficient of the best Scotch snuff to cover her body. This she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that precious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, were to be her bearers. Six old maids, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to carry the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a large handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, while at the door of the testator's house were to be placed for gratuitous distribution two bushels of the same quality of snuff.

Earthquakes and Pestilence.

From early times pestilence has been regarded as one of the accompaniments of earthquakes. Nor is this perhaps a mere figment of superstition. Many instances of epidemics following upon earthquakes are on record, says the Lancet. Thus in 527-50 A. D., earthquake years, Constantinople was visited by a pestilence, and in 615 A. D., after more than a decade of seismic disturbances which extended from Japan to the Mediterranean, the whole of Italy was visited, according to Sigonius, by a fearful epidemic, of which the nature is not recorded. Old writers, such as Von Plenciz, an authority on the Lisbon earthquake of 1755, were wont to attribute the proneness to disease exhibited by whole populations during earthquake season to shaken nerves begotten of prolonged suspense and broken rest at night.

A Clever Special Pleader.

Sir John Byles was a clever special pleader as a lawyer. In his young days he appeared in a breach of promise case to defend a man who had married another woman. Sir John cross examined the plaintiff thus: "Did he not promise to marry you when his father was dead?" "Yes." "Is his father dead?" "No." "Then that is my case. The defendant's wife may die before his father or afterward, and he may outlive them both, when it will be time for him to fulfill his promise."

It is also recorded that Sir John rode a horse called Business so that his clerk might conscientiously tell on callers that his master was out on business.—London Standard.
