PREMIER KING AT WASHINGTON

Discusses the Old Rush-Bagot Agreement With Secretary Hughes

Washington, July 13.—Early consummation of a treaty resting in more modern terms and giving permanent form to the essential principles of the century-old Rush-Bagot agreement for restriction of armament on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river was looked for today following the conference at the State Department between Premier King of Canada and Secretary of State Hughes.

In a statement issued last night after the conference for which the Canadian Premier came to Washington yesterday, and which also was attended by Hon. George P. Graham, the Canadian Minister of Defense, Mr. King said the negotiations were proposed by the Canadian government at this time in view of the "important strides" of world disarmament as a consequence of the recent Washington conference and the leadership given the movement by Secretary Hughes.

The Canadian ministers, the statement added, expressed themselves as "well pleased" with the sympathetic manner in which their representations were received by Secretary Hughes, and understood that formal negotiations would proceed by correspondence.

The agreement which the proposed new treaty would modernize having now all the force of an international convention, although not drawn in treaty form, was proclaimed by President Monroe in 1818, after having been ratified by the Senate.

THE ORANGE LEADER ON SCHOOL QUESTION

Challenges Roman Catholics to Take Question to a Vote of the People

St. Thomas, Ont., July 13.—Hurling a challenge to the Roman Catholic hierarchy of Ontario to take the question of separate high schools in the province to a vote of the people, H. C. Hocken, M. P., immediate Past Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Lodge, in Pinafore Park, yesterday afternoon, declared that he was willing to accept such a verdict as final.

Mr. Hocken declared that if the Roman Catholic hierarchy does not beware in its agitation for further concessions, their church will lose the privileges now enjoyed and separate schools will be in danger.

"We believe all children of Canada should be brought up together," he began, "Roman Catholic beside Protestant. It will further national unity, as they will have confidence in each other later as citizens. The Orange organization is pledged to support action against those who would put sectarian education on a level with public education, which is not fair."

PRESENTATION TO ST. JOHN ORANGEMEN

St. John, N. B., July 13.—A feature of the Orange picnic at Grand Bay yesterday was the presentation of a gold headed cane to James McKinney, sr., one of the oldest members of the Order in the city. Mr. McKinney is 85 years old and has been a member of the Order for sixty years. His five sons are all Orangemen and four of them were present to witness the honor paid to their father.

A ROPE OF SAND

(Continued.) But Mordant did not seem to hear. His eyes had wandered to the light figure in the doorway—a girl with wonderful hair that shimmered like burnished copper, and eyes that were blue as a summer sea. It was a Sunday afternoon, and several people had dropped into tea. The engagement had been announced the previous day, and Mordant had dropped in also to give his young fiancée the benefit of his support. Chris, however, was not to judge by appearance, needing any support. She seemed, in fact, to be frankly enjoying herself. The high spirits which her aunt deplored were very much in evidence at that moment. Her gay laugh reached him where he sat. Being engaged was evidently the greatest fun.

"They are all like that," continued Mrs. Forest with her air of one fulfilling an unpleasant duty—"all except Max, who is frankly objectionable. I grant you, but so deplorably unstable. Those boys—well, I have never dared to encourage them here, for I know too well what it would mean. If you are really thinking of buying their old home for yourself and Chris, do be on your guard or you will never keep them at arms' length."

"Kellerton Old Park will be Chris' property exclusively," Mordant replied gravely. "If she cares to have her brothers there, she will be quite at liberty to do so."

"My dear Trevor, you are far too kind," protested Mrs. Forest. "I see you are going to spoil them right and left. They will simply live on you if you do that. You won't find yourself master in your own house."

"No?" said Mordant, with a smile. "Chris was coming towards him. He rose to meet her."

"Oh, Trevor," she said eagerly. "I can go down to Kellerton with you tomorrow, and Max has written to say he will join us there. I am so glad he can get away. I haven't seen him since Christmas."

"Isn't he coming to your birthday party?" asked Jack Forest, striding up at that moment.

He addressed Chris, but he looked at his mother, who, after the briefest pause, made reply. "Of course Chris can ask whom she likes."

"Oh, can I?" exclaimed Chris. "How heavenly! Then I will get Rupert to suppose he is out of the question."

She slipped a hand surreptitiously inside Jack's arm as her aunt moved away, and squeezed it. She knew quite well that the party itself did not suppose he is out of the question. "No," said Chris. "I shall never ask you anywhere. You have a free pass always so far as I am concerned."

He made her a low bow. "You Hating, Trevor? I'll bet she never said that to you."

wards her fiancé. "There is no need to say anything to Trevor."

"Thank you," said Trevor quietly. Jack laughed. "One to you, my boy!" he admitted frankly. "By the way, I heard a funny story about you yesterday. Some one said you were turning your rooms in Clive street into a home for sick organ-grinders."

"Not strictly untrue either," commented Jack. "I know the sort of thing. You are always doing it. Was it a child or a woman or a mosey this time?"

"It was a man," said Mordant. "A man! A friend of yours, I suppose." Jack smiled over the phrase. He had heard it on Mordant's lips more than once.

"Exactly. A friend of mine." The tone of Mordant's reply did not encourage further inquiries. Chris, glancing at him, saw a slight frown between his brows and promptly changed the subject.

"It's really rather good of Aunt Philippa to let me have the boys here," she said later, when they were alone together for a moment just before he took his departure. "She never gets on with them, especially Max. Of course it's partly his fault. I hope you will like each other, Trevor."

By which sentence Trevor divined that this was her favorite brother. "We shall get on all right," he said. "I isn't every one that likes Max," she said. "But he is tremendously nice really, and very clever. What time will you be here tomorrow? I must try not to keep you waiting."

Put of course when the morning came she did keep him waiting. With the best intentions, Chris seldom managed to be ready for anything. And Mordant had nearly half an hour to wait before she joined him.

She raced down at last with an airy apology. "I'm very sorry really. But the photographer and I couldn't get him to sit at the right angle. And then when I got back I had to dress and everything went wrong."

She was carrying Cinders under her arm and evidently meant him to join her expedition. She did not look as if everything had gone wrong with her, neither did she look particularly perturbed. She laughed up at him merrily, and he could not help it—he drew her to him and kissed her.

"Oh, but you should kiss Cinders too," he said. "I love kissing Cinders. He is like salt."

"If we don't start we shall never get there," observed Mordant. "What an obvious remark!" laughed Chris. "Let's start at once. I hope you are going to score. Wouldn't it be funny if the motor broke down and we had to spend the night under a haystack?"

MAKE YOUR DOLLAR STRETCH

THE purchasing power of a dollar bill has shrunk considerably in the last ten years. There has never been a time when discriminate buying paid bigger dividends.

Every day this newspaper contains information that you should have to increase your buying power. The advertisements are intimate little lessons in every-day economy. They teach you how, when and for what your dollar will go farthest.

To those who know how to use it, newspaper advertising is a watchdog of dollars—a continuous source of economy and satisfaction.

Merchants tell of their bargains through the advertisements. Almost every new opportunity is offered through an advertisement. Practically every unusual buy is advertised.

You can stretch your dollar to its elastic limit by keeping abreast of the opportunities to get full value.

There's just one way to do this.
Read the advertisements.
