Standpatters.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Swash."

A standpatter is a stationary statesman who is satisfied with majorities as they are.

Standpatters are confined entirely to successful candidates. They have existed ever since Noah's time, when a large number of this great mariner's friends pronounced the forty days' rain to be only a slight local disturbance of no national bearing. Lot's wife was another eminent standpatter. She remained for centuries entirely motionless and looked steadfastly backward.

The standpatter believes there is a future, but does not believe in trying to haul it into the present by the neck. Political standpatters are satisfied with last year's laws and social standpatters are satisfied with last year's shorts. There has also arisen a new brand of standpatters who are regarded with great contempt in some quarters because they are satisfied with last year's wife.

Opinion varies as to the virtues of standpatters. We have the word of eminent statesmen to the effect that to stand pat is to rely upon the wisdom of the past, tempered with a firm tolerance of the present and a cautious survey of the future. We have the word of other statesmen to the effect that standpatism is a self-satisfied complacency merged with an intellectual timidity and surrounded by an impenetrable jungle of precedent, predestination, paternalism, pantheism, plutocracy and pooh-bah. The insurgent says that standpatism is a fungus, jealous of a jackrabbit, because the latter can move; a second-hand hedge anchor buried in the mud and waiting for the ship of state to come back and tie up to it; a mournful and neglected hen setting on a china egg; a crawfish hole calling on the sun to revolve around it because it refuses to budge.

However, this is nothing to what the standpatter calls the insurgent. One standpatter recently alluded to insurgency as a merry-go-round racing with the horizon to the music of a steam callopie.

A standpatter doesn't allude to the wheels of progress, but to the obelisk of accomplishment. His favorite hymn is "As it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be," and his model is the wooden Indian, which has done business for fifty years in America and which has never taken a step forward or made a single mistake.

Ringworm, scratches, crack skin and insect bites are best treated with Davis Menthol Salve, 25c. tin, prepared by Davis & Lawrence Co., Montreal.

THERE IS A VAST ARMY of men and women who really never know what it is to enjoy sound, vibrating health—who would be surprised to suddenly gain that exhilarating vitality that robust health brings.

Literally thousands without any particular sickness live in "general debility," as the doctors call it—have headaches, are tired and indifferent. To all such people we say with unmistakable earnestness—"Take Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month and allow its rare oil-fool to enrich and enliven your blood, quicken your circulation, stimulate nutrition, and aid nature to develop that real red-blooded life that means activity, enjoyment, success."

Scott's Emulsion is not a drug, but a pleasant food-fool—free from drugs. One bottle may help you.

New Chief of Staff.

General Sir Archibald Murray, who has just been appointed Chief of the Imperial General Staff, is one of our youngest and most brilliant soldiers. Fifty-five years of age, he entered the Army at the age of nineteen, and at twenty-seven was a captain.

General Murray first saw active service in the Zululand campaign of 1888. His greatest experience of war—excepting the present one, of course—was, however, in South Africa, where he was dangerously wounded. In the South African War he gained a great reputation for handling men. He was not only mentioned a number of times in despatches, but he was awarded the D.S.O., added seven clasps to his medals for the battles in which he took part, and emerged from the war a full colonel.

From 1907 to 1912 Sir Archibald was Director of Military Training, and from the latter year till the war broke out he was Inspector of Infantry.

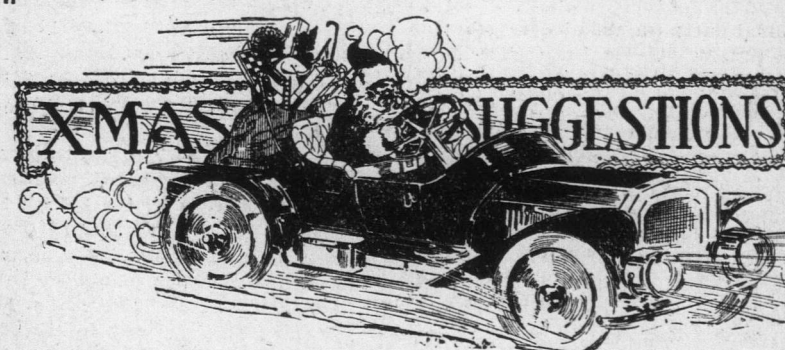

As soon as war was declared, General Murray was appointed to be Chief of the staff to Sir John French, who stated in one of his despatches that "Sir Archibald Murray has worked day and night unceasingly with the utmost skill, self-sacrifice and devotion."

As Chief of the Imperial General Staff, General Murray will be responsible for the choosing and organization of the best military brains for running the various campaigns we are fighting. Part of his duties, too, will be to train the officers of the new armies, one of the most important duties of any at the present time, for much depends upon the way an army is officered.

Sir Archibald is exceedingly popular in the Army, for he has won his high position through sheer hard work, and not influence.
