A mother in the quiet home watching by the casket of a dead child for one night exerts the artist to his utmost, but who is sufficient to put upon canvas a mother for aix months of midnight guarding her whole family, dead and gibbeted upon the mountains? Go home, Rizpah! You must be awfully tired! You are sacrificing your reason and your life for those whom you can never bring back again to your bosom. As I say that, from the darkest midnight of the century Rizpah turns upon me and cries: "How dare you tell me to go home? I am a mother. I am not tired. You might as well expect God to get tired as for a mother loget tired. I cared for those boys when they lay upon my breast in infancy, and I will not forsake them now that they are flead. Interrupt me not. There stoops an gagle that I must drive back with my sgonized cry. There is a panther I must beat back with my club!"

W. H. Corrie, miller in Hodd & Cullen's flour mill, met with a peculiar accident the other day. A trap had been set to catch rats, but instead of catching rats the mill cat was captured, the trap taking hold of one of its front paws. Mr. Corrie went to release the cat, which had been in the trap for some days, and in doing so the animal bit the first finger of his right hand, chewing it in such a way as to leave thirteen teeth marks. Mr. Corrie's medical attendant tells him he must be careful with the finger, as blood poisoning may result.—
