Six Yachts In 2000-Mile Race to Honolulu

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 21.—With a smashing breeze which sent the white water cutting from their bows and all sails flying, six fast yachts got away at 12.30 today on the 2000-mile race to Honolulu.

The Mariner, the San Francisco entry, tall-masted flag boat from the Gloucester banks, gained a lead of nearly a mile at the start, while the favorite, the Poinsettia, was last to cross the line.

Limit In Golf Has Been Reached

By James P. Guilford
One wonders if golf has quite reached its limit in the matter of brilliancy and consistency of performance when he views in retrospect the play of this last year or so. Scarcely a tournament nowadays but a course record goes, scarcely a course but has a new figure set up as a mark for future record breakers to shoot at. Only this past winter, Hogan, defeated the world by his mastery of St. Helens. Then Sarason shot his 64 at Briarcliff a week short of the Open. Couple this with rounds of like figures in practice by Outmet and Johnson and one begins to see the handwriting on the wall. As a clincher to prove the rapid improvement being made in the game we have but to refer to the last British open at Troon.

WHAT DOES FUTURE HOLD?
Before that event was played the course record was a 71 made by J. L. C. Jenkins, British amateur champion in 1914. In the championship itself and most trying weather conditions, especially for American golfers, three 71's, two 70's and two 69's were returned, the latter scored by the American entries, MacDonald, Smith and Joe Kirkwood. It is such performance as these which make us realize the great improvements that are yearly taking place and cause us to wonder what the future holds.

As these record-making rounds are played and prodigious drives are daily set down, such as Sarason's 110 yards shot to the green at Troon, it strikes us that the day is coming when star male golfers will rarely use three-shot holes. The first is far more accurate and more readily solves the problems one meets after leaving the green.

Pressure Makes No Difference
That which is most astonishing about all these record-breaking rounds is that so many of them are negotiated under pressure. It is as all who golf at all quite well know—a far more difficult task to sink a short or long putt, or to pitch dead to a hole or to play a wooden shot with due regard for placement and the ensuing approach, when carrying the weight of a tote event on your shoulders, than in a friendly round or a tournament of lesser importance.

One grizzled old British pro once informed me that a yard putt became a most vital matter during the rounds of play for a national open championship for the good reason that your living depended upon sinking it. He estimated that golf under such conditions was just twice as difficult as it is any other time. But irrespective of this pressure, star golfers are able to burn up courses with record rounds during open events. All of which leads us to the conclusion that the high-water mark in scoring has not yet been reached and that we who play today will still be striving for honors when the field produces champions whose scores would now be deemed impossible.

Lower scoring on the average is coming through a better understanding of direction and distance. Of course, direction and distance are big subjects encompassing all there is to golf, but let me get down to specific facts. What we mean, is that the outstanding stars of the decade ahead will give far more attention to the execution of tee shots and approach more to playing long irons dead to the pin rather than to the green. They will also be more certain of long distances of the tee. And in the long run of 72 holes they will get a few more chances for birdies per round than they do today. Now, as all good golfers realize the value of the putt, this combination is certain to reap more birdies as well as an occasional eagle. That is why we look for a slightly better game in the near future than even the one we have today.

Some seem to think that eventual elimination of the ubiquitous iron with punched faces—"carrot graters" they call them in England—will lower the standard of play, but the work of our stars and of many British right after they were "ruled out" for the British open seems sufficient to warrant the belief that the smooth-faced masher will get a golfer around in a record number of shots.

Furthermore, it will be a good thing to have such clubs eliminated, for it is one mechanical contrivance is permitted, others would have to be. Golf should be played by the player, rather than by his club and the earlier we reach that conclusion, the better it will be for the sport.

Napier Trophy Now Between C. H. S. and C. N. R. Nines

When the C. N. R. nine defeated the Cubs on Monday evening in the last postponed game of the local league series they incidentally tied with the C. H. S. This outcome was predicted by local baseball enthusiasts and a play-off game between the two leading teams will be staged to decide the league supremacy and simultaneously which team shall win the coveted Napier Trophy.

The possibility of a big play-off game between the C. N. R. and C. H. S. nine created much interest and placed many others, who previously did not manifest any active interest in the series, are showing keen anticipation and are eager to learn the exact date of the match.

As yet, however, no definite date has been set. It is expected, however, that when this final league event does transpire a big crowd will be on hand for there is little doubt but what it will be the best exhibition of baseball so far this season.

The Gale Receipts
During the league series just completed the gate receipts have, somewhat exceeded this season's hay crop—only for exceedingly dimness of vision they have even the scanty hay crop beaten. And lately this characteristic has become even more pronounced.

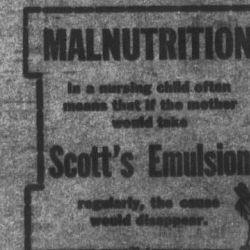

Those who may have any desire to patronize or encourage good outdoor sport will have another chance to show a little appreciation of the efforts being put forth according to a report received today. It is the intention of the Club to form up two special teams, composed of the best players of the different league teams and arrange a short series of games; the winners of the best out of three or five games to be declared the victors of this second series. Deliberate arrangements have not yet been completed but it is expected that the opening game of the new series will be played within the next week.

When Babe Ruth isn't busy slugging out home runs he is selling something that will keep Judge Landis and Ban Johnson interested. In 1921 Ruth made a home run. The lively ball in use was regarded as the big reason for this remarkable feat. The Babe should come through the year with a goodly share of circuit drives, in all probability an investigation of the bat he uses will be demanded. On July 2 Ruth started to use a bat, the like of which has never been seen in the baseball world.

Bobby Jones, winner of the U. S. golf championship has entered the 1923 amateur event to be played at Flossmoor, Chicago, in September. He was recently received at his home town, Atlanta, Ga., by 2500 people headed by a brass band. The Atlanta Athletic Association, and representatives of civic organizations were among those present. Jones was escorted to his home. This week a dinner will be given in his honor.

The first appearance in the ring of "Nedder" Healey, who won a decision over McIntyre at Halifax, last Monday night, and thereby annexed the Maritime welterweight title, will be in St. John on Monday night, August 6, when he meets Gordon Fane.

At London on Saturday the Oxford Cambridge College of England won an athletic meet from the Yale-Harvard universities. The former won six events and the Yale-Harvard combination five, with the high jump result in a tie between Gerald of Harvard and Dickinson, of Oxford, both of whom cleared the bar at 5 feet 2 inches. First places only counted in the scoring and a half point went to each team for this event, giving the Englishmen a point advantage at the finish.
