Fire in Yonge Street Early this Morning-The Electric Despatch Office Cleaned Out-A Bungling Alarm.

At 2.10 this morning W. Burgess, th night operator in the electric despatch office Yonge street, near King, was aroused from his drowsiness by volumes of smoke ascending from the cellar. He immediately ran ing from the cellar. He immediately ran to the street and called fire. Policeman Guddy sounded an alarm from box 68, Yonge and King, but the apparatus was all astray, and instead of 68 the gong struck 4. By this mishap the result might have been very serions. The Court street hooks were dashing madly along Adelaide street and would have gone on past Yonge had not the astute eye of Chief Graham caught sight of the smoke, and a sudden halt was made. When the wagon reached the seene there were no hose-reels on hand, but Bay and Yonge streets soon put in an appearance. The fire broke out in the cel-lar beneath the despatch office, and shot up through a shaft in the rear to Dineen's work-shops, where there are large quantities of through a shaft in the rear to Dineen's work-shops, where there are large quantities of furs, etc. The flames, however, did not make much headway here. They also spread to the eigar store adjoining the des-patch office, but were not easily subdued. The loss will principally be by water. Mr. Dixon's family were asleep at the top of the building, but were aroused before the fire had made much progress. The building is owned by Mr. Stauntor. LFFT. DOLEFUL BALLAD OF MR. MUMFORD'S EXPEN Long time a salesman he had been, With scarce enough of cash To keep him well in clothes, and pay His weekly bill for hash. He'd never been well off, but then, Praised to the powers above, He'd not been unsuccessful, for He'd never been in love. For 'tis well known by everyone, There's nothing can be worse Than sparking for to empty out The richest fellow's purse. So still this youth had struggled on, Nor flirted he the while; When some good rich relation died And left him all his pile. Then he would have no more of hash, But hied he down the town, And dined he at a retaurant And did the thing up brown; And there a pretty female girl Did wait upon his nibs, And served him faithfully with soup, And fish, and roasted ribs. To influences well combined Of glances and of pies, He did succumb, and fell in love Up to his very eyes. And as you'll guess he did propose Unto the virgin fair; And then they two were knit in one Yet still remained a pair.

The benedict at once did hire A twenty-five cent hack; And unto that there restaurant The happy pair drove back. He went inside to take a drink. As happy as a king, And, as he gulped the liquor down, Her praises he did sin He said she was the finest girl That ever trod the earth; That she loved him, and he loved her; For well he knew her worth.

He said: they on their wedding tour Intended for to go. And then he walked out thro the door, As straight as he knew how But once outside, the sorry fact Was soon to him made known. While he inside was making free, The pretty bird had flown.

The Ragamuffin finds, good friends

A Great Crowd at the Rink.

The Adelaide street rink was fairly pack-ed last night, and was also well filled in the afternoon. The attendance last night far exceeded anything that has patronized Jacob's great dime museum since it opened two weeks ago. The people have now fully realized that there never was such an at-traction in the city before for the money. The two performances of yesterday were made further attractive by the addition of two Zaba and the Maximum the a subtwo Zulus and the Marionnettes in a pan-tomime. The Zulus gave instructing Illu-strations of life in their native land, etc. Be sure and take the little ones to the rink either afterncon or evening

Castle's Celebrities A variety performance under the above title was given at the Grand opera house last night to a crowded gallery, but a rather last night to a crowded gallery, but a rather slim downstair crowd. It is hard to find out where the company as a whole got the name of celebrities. Two-thirds of them have no claim to recognition. Antonio on the elack wire was really fine, as were also Neil Smith's trained dogs. Mason and Ralston found much favor with the gods, probably on account of their grotesqueness and difference in size. The engagement is announced for all week.

The Gould Street Capture. Effic Wilson was brought into the police court yesterday charged with keeping a die orderly house at No. 7 Gould street, raided orderly house at No. 7 Gould street, raided by the police on Sunday night. On the ples of illness, Wilson's trial was portponed till the 24th, bail being accepted. Mattie Gra-ham and Maggie Smith, charged with being inmates, were also remanded till the 24th. The seven men found in the place were also remanded for trial till the same date. They were all admitted to bail. Carnegie v. Federal Bank. Mr. Dalton gave judgment yesterday upon application of the bank, to add as a further defence that the Ontario bank shares were deposited with them for the purpose of raising money to gamble in stocks, that the purpose for which the money was raised was illegal, and, therefore, the plaintiff was not entitled to an account. The master in chambers decided that the defence could be babba

A Child Left in a Saloon. At 5.30 last evening a two-weeks' old male infant was found in the sitting-room of the Osgoode hotel at Queen and Che streets. Some one had entered the hall-door and deposited it there. The little one, which had on a white dress, a red fiannel peticost, white cloud and white and blue cap, was sent to the infants' home.

Periury in an Election Trial. Charges of conspiracy and perjury have been laid against J. Strader and one Erstwistle, who swore in the East York election trial that Mr. Badgerow had treated them on election day. The preliminary investi-gation will be before the police magistrate to-day.

A Warning to Young Ladies. We read in an exchange of a young lady having been made crazy by a sudden kins. This should teach young ladies to be con-stantly expecting something of that kind, and to be prepared for it when it comes.
