ception they had accorded him and his companien, Miss Terry. They had given his company a royal Canadian welcome [applause], and if he might say it a right British welcome [applause]. There were two circumstances he regretted. One was that he was obliged to make so short a stay in Toronto. [A woice—Come back again.] After the ap-plause and laughter occasioned by this in-terjection had subsided, Mr. Irving said he probably would come back again [ap-plause]. The other circumstance he re-gretted was that they were not able to see their friends in Montreal, Ottawa and some other cities of the dominion. He had been told that Ottawa meant in the Indian tongue a place of meeting. This Engagement of One of Irving's Company excess finds his reason overturned. Saul nursed his temper till he became possessed of the spirit of the devil. We must have established laws. Transfer all these things to the next world. The distinction be-tween right and wrong will be recognized there to a far greater extent than here. Man refuse to confess their sins here, and harden their hearts against Christ. Will they do so in the next world? Do you believe that He is no respecter of persons? If salvation is refused here how do you ex-pect to be all right in the world to come? There can be no other Saviour—"there re-maineth no more sacrifice for sin." A man is free to go to hell if he chooses, but, the preacher added, do not continue in a course of sin that must lead to punishment and try to relieve yourself by blaming God. In conclusion, the doctor referred to Christ's atonement for sin, and asked his hearers how they expected to escape if they neglected so great a salvation.
