Apple Inspectors Active.

The proper packing and marking of apples for shipment has no doubt made creat advancement in the past decade That there is yet a possibility of im provement is evidenced by the fact that one of our packet captains was cently prosecuted and fined in St. John for placing improperly marked fruit on the market. The case has some strange aspects. In the first chliged to ray a fine for the faulty nor owners had seen the inside of the barrel, and were simply selling it for these who had shipped it by their whose name was on the barrel is one of the most reliable and progressive of the farmers of the Annapolis Val-ley and would scarcely lend his name to such cheap means of gain as an in tentional act of this sort. Notwithstanding these seeming con radictions the fact remains, that there was something radically wrong to pass unnoticed. The Fruit Marks Act, we are glad to note, is not to be one of those laws placed on the Statute book but never enforced. The activity of the inspectors both home about the condition of the barrels of apples on which their names are stamped, as a little carelessness may entail a great expense, beside destroying their reputation as honest pack
