

would be so useful to the Indians. Another consideration is, that a number of these plates having already been made for the Wara, the expense of a new edition is greatly reduced thereby; but to issue a work with new plates would be very difficult.

To those who consider that the papers issued in Shorthland are very small for the price, it is proper to remark, that as one page of Shorthland contains as much as four common