

House. The news has been telegraphed all over the islands, and the crowd of people on the wharf indicates the interest which attaches to our advent. The majority town. The pride-of-India trees, offering agreeable shade, border one side of the street, while stores, unpretending in appearance, extend along the other. From the nature of the soil, the streets are almost white, imparting an unpleasant glare. As we land, no hackman vociferates. No man, of any call-of those standing there are coloured, with a sprinkling of men well-to-do and English in appearance, while the presence of the British soldier and sailor suggests the fact that this is one of England's military and naval stations.

BITS IN BERMUDA.

We are anchored just opposite Front Street, which, we learn, is the principal business street of the ing, vociferates in this latitude. If we desire a carriage, we send for it; otherwise we walk. The air, free from impurities and laden with the perfumes of the flowers, is delicious: it is a joy to breathe.

The town is small. It is laid out quite regularly, and is interesting for its location and novelty. Glancing at the white roofs, one's