THE GRADUATING CLASS.

Although the number of students in theology is greater this year than ever before the graduating class is not so large. It was an unfortunate year, and its once respectable list was reduced to thirteen—a significant number. But if the speeches made at the students' supper are to be believed the "noble thirteen" of 1890 are endowed with more than their share of "grace, grit and gumption." We shall remember their names and wait to see how far they will fulfil the large expectations formed of them. When Principal Caven announced each name and presented each with a college diploma the applause from the gallery was full of meaning to the sensitive ear. When P. J. McLaren was receiving his parchment the gallery repeated the Principal's words, that had it not been for Mr. McLaren's long illness the struggle for third year laurels would have been harder and the results might have been different. The names of the graduates are: H. E. A. Reid, B.A.; James Drummond, B.A.; Walter Muir; J. P. McQuarrie; M. P. Talling, B.A.; P. J. McLaren, B.A.; W. J. Clark; W. A. Bradley, B.A.; Alexander Wilson; Jas. M. McLaren, B.A.; Neil Shaw, B.A.; John Crawford, B.A.
