

previous to the constituting a Council or Board of Trade continued in Force until May, 1696; but, as is conceived, was not renewed until the 1st of October, 1714.

In 1695, several Members of the Honourable the House of Commons were for establishing a Board of Commerce, and also for appointing Commissioners for Trade and Plantation. But this was objected to by others as an Incroachment on the Rights of the Crown. However, all agreed as to the Use and Necessity of appointing such a Board.
