ARMY SERVICE MEN HEAR LECTURE ON ATLANTIC TRIP AND SIGHTS IN LONDON

The members of the Army Service Corps who are quartered in the exhibition building were entertained last evening by Mrs. E. Atherton Smith in her graphic illustrated address on a voyage across the Atlantic and a visit to historic London. Mrs. Smith was asked during the afternoon if she could deliver the address, and Mr. Barracough very kindly consented to go with his lantern to present the views. Mrs. Smith was accompanied by the officers of the Royal Standard Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, and by Colonel Mitchell and Mrs. Mitchell and R. J. Hooper and Mrs. Hooper. The address was given in the large dining room of the exhibition building, and was of very special interest to the Army Service men from the west.

At the close of the address, Colonel Mitchell spoke words of appreciation, and in behalf of the men tendered their thanks to Mrs. Smith. Then the men themselves gave her three cheers and a tiger, and with cheers for the king and with the national anthem the very interesting evening was brought to a close.

The Man In The Street

If April showers are a criterion, Mayflowers should be abundant.

Head line reads: "That thaw ends German offensive in Poland"—That fellow's always been notorious.

Story in current magazine refers to the "luxury of modern travel." The author probably had the extra touches of war tax on the berth in mind.

Nietzsche Again!

Sporting writer says that "Willard loomed up like a superman." Sounds like something Nietzsche might have uttered!

By the way, what inning is this in that game of Nietzsche?

Or if the contest is over, who won?

Tantricate, lots of people feel that the result of the humorous and voluminous discussion is that "there used to be a guy with a funny name. He's dead, so let's get on with it."

Pure maple sugar is on the market—also maple sugar marked "pure."

But What Good Will That Do?

Even though the bylaws prohibit their stopping, motorists on the street cars are hopeful of again seeing the crossings along Brussels street when the sun's rays have dried the mud.

This censorship business seems to be going to the extreme! The attorney-general now has a "silent" partner.

"Light" Little Isle

The Hamilton Herald man rises to remark: If King George, Lloyd George and Kitchener can have their way, British will cease to be "that light little island" so long as the war lasts.

Canadian soldiers are hurling hand grenades "with lacrosse sticks; hope some of our boys will try using their baseball bats for the same purpose."

If the speaker of the senate cannot join the forces and strike a blow for the empire he at least knows how to go on strike for his own rights.

Will the members of New Brunswick's government follow the example set by their colleagues in P. E. Island and voluntarily climb upon the water wagon?

Messrs. Foster and Garland, read out of the Conservative party by the Premier, should form a coalition with ex-Premier Flemming and J. K. Pinder and organize a new party of their own. Their ideals seem to be similar.

Paying your bills with cash instead of cheques since the war tax went into effect?

Looks as if the owner of coupon bearing bonds should be able to pay a war tax more easily than a man who has to discount a promissory note.

Soldier says he was released from 28th because he was not sworn in right. Sounds funny; most of the officers we have met know to swear all right.

With the big league games commencing, the war will have to split the front page space with baseball news in the United States. Better finish it up before the world's series commences.

We know when the baseball leagues will finish, but we don't know the winner; just the opposite of the European war situation.

Away With It

With the military salute becoming popular as a form of greeting, even among civilians, would not this be a good time to abolish that antiquated custom of lifting the hat.

Of the dark ages, a relic of the barbarous times when it was necessary to uncover the head to show that a man did not expect his friend to check his nut with a club, it has no place in modern civilization. Even if it is, now used chiefly as a mark of respect to the ladies, the fair sex should glory but little in a tribute which results in so many stresses in winter weather. Any man who has ever walked along a street crowded with friends and has had to keep his hat in an active motion as if he were waving it for a military victory will be glad to join the movement and the bald-heads will be unanimous for it. The man in the street is not bold yet, but he has fears and, in self defence, he will cast his vote for the much needed reform. Here is an opportunity for a leader to gain everlasting renown by heading a popular movement.

McMillan, J. A. Kennedy for Gunn's, Ltd. and W. C. Cross of Hall & Fairweather.

PRESENTATIONS

Deacon and Mrs. Akersley Remembered by Victoria Street Church Congregation.

After prayer meeting in Victoria street Baptist church last evening an agreeable surprise was tendered Deacon R. E. Akersley and his wife by the members of the congregation. The pastor, Rev. B. H. Nobles, called them forward and in a neat address, expressive of the esteem in which they had been held and the general regret at their departure from the city, presented to Mrs. Akersley a handsome casserole, and to Deacon Akersley a suit case and a silver topped cane engraved with his monogram.

Deacon Akersley and his wife have for many years been active members of Victoria street church. They intend to leave soon for Thornetown, Queens county, where they have purchased a farm and where they intend to reside.

GERMANS HERE AS PRISONERS

Three Hundred Sailors, Including Part of Dresden's Crew, Arrived on S. S. St. George En Route to Amherst

When the steamer St. George, Captain MacLaren, was considered by the government from the C. P. R., steamed into port this morning, and docked at the International wharf, she had aboard more than 800 prisoners of war, almost all Germans who had been taking their part in the war of the Fatherland upon the high seas against the Allies. Most of them were in sailors' uniforms.

They were kept aboard ship until a strong guard with bayonets drawn was thrown in cord on about the sheds and wharves, as much to keep back the crowd of citizens who thronged the neighborhood to "get a peep" at the prisoners, as to guard against any of the latter trying to make his escape.

After the preliminaries attendant to the arrival, the prisoners were marched to a special train of I. C. R. cars. It was nearly two o'clock before the train, with Conductor Capson in charge, pulled out for Amherst, where the prisoners will be kept in detention camp.

The prisoners were a sturdy looking lot for the most part, some smiling bitterly, included in their number were members of the crews of German men-of-war, some from the Dresden, and from the crews of ships of the German merchant marine, taken off shipboard or captured by British monarchs of the waters.

The crowds along the piers stood patiently for an hour or more waiting to see them, and only a few "libes" were flung as they filed into the cars. Platoons from the 24th Battalion kept guard, while soldiers from Bermuda and Jamaica, from where the St. George brought the prisoners, accompanied them to Amherst as guard.
