Twins of War.
(London Express).
Two soldiers, today lying side by side in Bath War Hospital, furnish a truly wonderful example of the strange coincidences which sometimes happen in war. Both men belong to the same Scottish hamlet, enlisted in the same regiment, fought in France together, and were wounded side by side when wounded by bullets which struck them in their left ankles and passed into their right feet. Each has had his right foot amputated. Brought home together, they traveled in the same coach of the ambulance train to Bath, where they now rest in the same ward.
