THE REACTION. Medical men of the highest standing medical associations in different parts of the world, and recent medical writers, are advocating the moderate use of stimulants It is a well known fact that the late Dr Richardson, the celebrated teetotal advocat of my boyhood whose name is (or used to be) a "household word" among the brethren radically changed his opinion on the subject before his death, and eintroduced into hi family the moderate use of stimulant Evidences therefore are multiplying on all at to their old position, yet to a middle one which, while rejecting the old theory.

RECKLESS EXAGGERATION. 3. Another evil feature of the teetote craze is the reckless exaggeration indulged in by its advocates in the press and in the pulpit and on the platform. We are told, for instance, that a certain number of persons, equal to half the entire death rate, die from the effect of immoderate drinking. But is it possible for anyone in his senses t accept such a statement as that? Is a possible for any one who has had any ex perience of life in Canada to believe the nore than, say, 5 per cent. of the entire death rate is due to excessive indulgence intoxicating liquors.

AS A CLERGYMAN OF SOME EXPERIENCE. and one whose work has mainly laid amou those classes said to be most addicted to excessive drinking, I am not afraid to say the the percentage of habitual drunkards of Ontario is exceedingly low. In a town several thousand inhabitants where I one resided all the habitual drunkards counhave been counted upon the fingers. could at this moment give the names from memory. And if this town, and others is which I have lived, are any criterion, no more on the outside than one per cent o the general population are using intox at least to the extent of interfering with the discharge of the every day duties of lite.

POOR SUPPORT FOR ANY CAUSE. But, to judge from the stock statemen of teetotal advocates at least 50 per cent." o the general population are, if not actua drunkards, habitually using liquor to excess -Canadian society - a sort of pandemonium of riot and drunkenness, and every other man you meet more or less of a sot. Any cause that requires to be bolstered up with possess little intrinsic worth or strength. And all this sort of exaggeration, indulge in as it is by public guides and teachers, transparently absurd, as it nevertheless i and bearing its own refutation on its face, is bound to have a demoralizing effect upon the general public, and especially the young and unreflecting, in making it lawfu or excusable to sucrifice truth to make a point, and condoning any kind of safe falsification for the nurnear of helping on a "found." for the purpose of helping on a "good cau-e."
