You are already married,' she would retort, and his wife would often join them in this good-natured joking.

'There is not a girl in all Italy any prettier than you,' old Paulo used to till her, 'and I 'don't believe there is one your equal in Milan. I like you so well my lass, that I am anxious to have you marry some good man. The good father was telling me just the other day that I must look after you'

'Hut my own father and mother can do that,' she would answer. 'You do not seem to realize that they are living and that I am very happy with them.'

'I know,' said Paulo, 'but I don't think that they can think more of you than I do.

"I know, said Paulo, 'but I don't think that they can think more of you than I do. Why, I've known you since you were a little baby lying in your mother's arms and cooing whenever I came near you."

'We are good friends,' she would say.
'That we are,' he would answer, and times when you don't come when I expect you, I realize how dear you are to us. Neither wite nor I thinks that the morning or atternoon is perfect if you don't come in to see us. Your father told me the other day that I would snot you; that you had day that I would spoil you; that you had begun to have ideas of marriage, as I spoke about a few minutes ago."
There is no one I know of, she answer-

'There is no one I anow or, she answered.

'There are so many young fellows around here who would like to marry you, it hat I know,' he answered.

'I don't love them,' she would say, with a shake of her head. 'The man I marry must have my love.'

'That's right, Angela,' he said, 'you must marry for love and not for wealth, but still you must be sure that your husbard can support you.

started in to learn the American ways and the American language.

'It is slow,' he said to one of his friends
once, 'but I will learn after awhile. Others have had to learn and so will I.'

'You must marry an American g'rl.

Then you will always have someone to talk to you in the language,' replied his friend.

'I will become a native of this country,' Martino sesponded, 'but I will marry an Italian gisl. I don't know who it will be,' he hastened to add, 'tor I don't intend to marry until I am prosperous; until I can support a wife in the manner in which she sheuld be supported. You know I hope some day to have a home of my own, out in the suburbs of some city. There I can have room to stir around in and not be buddled together like we are compelled to live in the tenements and in the crowded city streets.'

live in the tenements and in the crowded city streets.'

You want to sit out in the yard like the old people in Italy, eh?' said his friend.

'Do you often think of that?'

'Very often,' responded Martino. 'My father and mother, k warrant, are at this instant sitting out in our yard—'

His voice choked, and two big tears came. But that was a dozen years ago, and he was a young man, and was unacquainted with the country and the customs and was often homesick. But he learned rapidly. He bought a reader and he soon mastered the language, and aside from this he heard the language all the time.

Martino first lived in New York, but !

him a good wife. She has hever her that though.

'Who is it?' she asked, her voice being so low that it was with difficulty that she was understood.

'You,' said Paulo.
She threw the letter down on the chair and ran out of the room and to her home. There she told her parents what her friends had decided.

There she total are parameters had decided.

But that is a long way,' said her father.

'He is a good man, too' sail her father.

O'd Paulo and his wife came over and told her parents what she had told them.

'I have written to him several times about Angela,' said Paulo, 'ard he knows her a'most as well as I do. I will tell him that I have selected his wife.'

That very night the letter was written and mailed. Next day it was speeding lor St. Louis.

There was great excitement in that a shake of her head. 'The man I marry must have my love.'

'That's right, Angela,' he said, 'you must marry for love and nct for wealth, but still you must be sure that your husband can support you,

'Oh, I will,' she replied.

Then she took up the book she was reading aloud to him and went on, while he lighted his pipe and sat looking at her.' Sometimes when she read for a lew minutes she would stop and the two would sit pertectly still, looking up through the trees at the sky, always the bluest in Italy.

They were occupied with their own thoughts and once she suddenly asked him. 'How is Martino?'

The two sat lor reveral seconds. and then he said: 'He is a good son,' he repeated. The girl looked at him and nodded assent.

'Yes he is good—and handsome,' she added, for she had seen his photograph, though she had never seen him. Then she sang a few lines of a love song and as it suddenly recollecting terself. stopped abruptly. She was blushing and an odd light was in her eyes when she picksd up the book and resumed her reading.

The old man locked at her a moment. She was conscious of his scrutiny, and held the book up in front of her face. He noticed that her little hands trembled.

Then he nodded his hear and laughed and chuckled to himself. He thought that he had learned something that perhaps even she did not know.

Martino Serati had prospered in America.

He was a poor but hardworking Italian lad when he came to this country. His knowledge of the language was limited, but he served in to lear the American ways and

Among the first stories recorded by T. E Pritt, in his 'Anglers' Basket' is on about a Scottish laird who was relating the story of a fine fish he had caught one day to his friends at the dinner table. 'Donald,' said he to the servant behind his chair—an

'Weel,' replied Donald, 'it was twal' pund at breaktast, it had gotten to achteen at dinner time and it was sax and twenty when ye sat down to supper wi' the captain.' Then, after a pause, he added, 'I've been tellin' lees a' my life to please the shooters, but I'll be blowed if I'm geing to tell kes noo, through my old age, to please the tushers."

without a Peer-Works Miraeles

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is without a peer. This great remedy relieves insten'ly the most aggravated and distressing forms of heart disease. It is the surest and quickest acting formula for heart trouble known to medical science, and thousands of times has the hand of the grim destroyer teen stayed by its use. If there is palpitation, Shortness of breath, pain in the left side, Smothering Sensations don't delay or you may be counted in the long list of those who have gone over to the great majority, because the best remedy in the world to day was not promptly used.

Mrs. Laura E. Newell of Zeandale is the most prolific song writer in the United States. She writes both sacred and secular songs, but prefers the former. Mrs. Newell is only 43 years old, and, although she has attended to the duties devolving upon a mother of six childred she has found time to write 4000 peoms, most of which have been published.
