NOW IS THE TIME TO ECONOMICALLY BUY Fairweather's Furs

HERE'S every reason to show that as the season advances you'll have to pay more-るの scarcity of skilled furriers, shortage of skins, and the increased demand for good furs-all these mean higher prices later on. During the summer months our own factories have been busy turning out the same high grade furs that the people of Canada have been taught to expect from the House of Fairweather. Expert workmanship and selected skins make Fairweather Furs look better and last longer.

this triumph of the spirit. Life was no longer a thing of days or even years. It had leaped beyond the ages, and down the dazzling pathway of the future shone victory and triumph. I felt it in all sorts and kinds of women, in the factory worker, the teacher, the stay-at-home mother, the suffragist, the woman preacher and artist. Each had left self and personal gain behind. The eyes of each were turned toward the little children of to-morrow." She says further:

"One of the great women in England is Emmeline Pethick-Lawrence. She and Emmeline Pankhurst will go down in history as the famous leaders of the militant suffrage movement. But Mrs. Pankhurst was the body, Mrs. Lawrence the spirit. When the militants took to smashing windows and burning houses Mrs. Lawrence protested. She would give her life for the cause but she would not hurt others. Her way of winning was through the spirit. It was the woman's way. She left the organization. To-day she continues true to those ideals. Her method of service in the great world struggle is through the spirit. She urges women to be warriors of the spirit. She goes back and forth through the land speaking. I heard her many times and wherever she went, hearts were unlocked to her and there came a great determina-tion to die if need be for the race to come.

Not only in her impersonal life, but in her personal does Emmeline Pethick-Lawrence spread inspiration. Her country home is in Surrey, not far from George Meredith's old home. It is a white house with lattice windows out of which Kate Greenaway might have looked. There is a high green hedge around the house and smooth, green lawns, and when luncheon time comes, a table is spread out of doors. All the story-book pictures of England come true here. Inside the house is all white, and there are gay-colored chintzes at the windows, and bowls of flowers everywhere. It is a sort of fairy-book house, and the spirit of the place fits the surroundings. Beyond the kitchen is a sitting-room for the maids. Here they entertain their company and play their own piano. At the kitchen door lean two bicycles. Every afternoon the maids ride off into the deep, cool, English country. Everywhere in this little home there is gladness and song. The birds sing outside, and the maids sing within, and one's spirit mounts and mounts until it touches the stars, and one's being mixes and mingles with the sky and the sunshine and the flowers until one loses identity and becomes part of the universal, and there grows in the heart a determination to make the beauty and wonder of life a reality for the little children to come.

"Mrs. Lawrence's children are the world's children, for she has none of her own. But never was there a better möther. She cherishes with passion all who come to her. She is like the earth,

In this young soldier unafraid,

That sight 1 must miss utterly. Yet by the prayers my lips have prayed,-By hope, by pride, by fealty,-By all I would to serve and aid, My heart hath known maternity, I spake not truly when I said I have no son in this crusade."

Heroines of Service

In one airplane factory on this continent a large part of the work is done by girls. They pack the parts of the machines, stuff bags with excelsior to protect delicate mechanism from injury, work on the wiring, solder joints of wire, and cut copper pieces. They also sew the linen wings on the planes and do practically all the work of preparing the wings for flight.

Reports show that women are engaged in railroad tank painting, hardware industry processes, garage management, and ranch work, as well as many other industries untried by them before the war. Processes in hardware industries include the work of screw machine hands, spot welders, gas welders, dip braziers, and drill press and bench work.

In France Mlle. Jane Guillemin, as inspectatrice of women labor for the Ministry of War in Paris has directly under her charge 16,000 laborers-not men, but women and girls.

One of the outstanding features of the war has been the determined way in which women have thrown themselves body and spirit, into works of all kinds.

When Madame Shuman Heinck offered her services free to the U.S. government she said: "I'll go where I am most needed. If you want me to go to France to scrub floors in hospitals, send me." But she was needed more to sing to the soldiers. With her three sons in the American army she offers all she has.

When the war is over I wonder if a valuable set of books will be published under the title of Heroines of Service, where the deeds of mothers of men, Red Cross nurses, volunteer aids, women of the Salvation Army and Y.W.C.A. workers and the thousands of others in war work will be recorded.

But the deeds of the noblest can never be published. They are written in gold on the pages of eternity.

You Can

We hear so many young women regret their position in life. One said to me the other day: "It is a pity for a girl to see a place in life she would like to attain and yet never be able to realize her ambition.' I turned to her and replied: "You may if you will. It all depends how much you want that attainment.'

There is a story in the Youth's Companion about a young man who wanted to be a great speaker. He asked a woman ublic lecturer if she thought it would be ossible. "How much do you want to become a cturer?" she asked. "Why, I want it very much," he nswered promptly. "But how much?" she persisted. "Are ou willing to work to the limit of your trength? Are you willing to go hungry? Are you willing to go shabbily dressed hat people will laugh at you? Are you villing to give up everything in the way f pleasure for it? Are you willing to ght when it seems there isn't a chance of vinning?" He hesitated only a moment. "I'believe am," he said slowly.

The Maternal Ileart There is no woman in this wide world I admire more than the one with a mater- nal heart. She may be a teacher, a nurse or a business woman who blesses the lives of children by the wisdom of her help, and the inspiration of her personality. Many successful business men acknowl- edge their gratitude to some woman who first gave them the vision of their place in life. There are sisters of great men; there are friends of famous men; there are teachers of learned scientists and there are in- spirational leaders of successful business men. I care not who they are, such	H sp h y u c

Several years later he met this woman. Ie had become a powerful platform peaker.

"But it's worth all it cost," he said to her and now I am busy telling other young people that there isn't anything in this world that is worth while that they will there if there exert it headly enough can't have if they want it badly enough o pay the price."

Music in a Girl's Life

It seems to me that music is almost a necessity in a girl's life. There is a choral society in every village of Wales. Between village and village, between city and city, there are competitive tests. How much this means to the people of
