Editor's Talk

A MID all this talk of flags, of gunboats on the Great Lakes, and of international tariffs, it is pleasant to be able to publish a letter and some photographs showing that our relations are still pleasant. Canada and the United States appreciate each other more truly to-day than ever before. The governments may have differences; but the peoples will always treat each other considerately. Last week it was the Champlain celebration; this week it is the visit of the Christian Endeavourists to Denver and Salt Lake City.

Dr. Richards will follow up this letter with others telling of their experiences at Seattle where the international conference has just been held. The editor is pleased to have the material, because it is always more pleasant to talk of good-will than of strife. The new tariff may be rather antagonistic but that is a habit of tariffs and tariff-makers. Customs revenues are national necessities on this continent; and matters of business must be kept distinct from matters of sentiment and feeling.
