Adams, Charles Felicia, b. 1842, at Dorchester, Mass.; has been a frequent contributor to periodicals, chiefly of humorous poems in German-English. Some of these have been published in book form under the title of: 1. Leedle Yawweh and other Poems, Bost., 1877, 12mo. 2. Dialect Ballads, Illust. N. York, 1877, 12mo.

Adams, Charles Francis, LL.D., [ante, vol. I, ad.], d. 1880, et, 70. He was elected member of Congress for the third district of Massachusetts in 1858, and re-elected in 1860, but resigned in the spring of 1861 on his appointment as U. S. minister to England, a post which he continued to occupy until 1868. His services in this capacity during an eventful and critical period belong to the history of American diplomacy. In 1871-72 he acted as arbitrator for the United States in the Commission which sat at Geneva to settle the "Alabama" claims. An attempt on the part of a body of independent voters to secure his nomination for the Presidency in 1872 proved unsuccessful. No biography of Mr.
Adams has yet been published or announced, though he may be supposed to have left copious materials for such a work. The fullest sketch of his career that has yet appeared may be found in an article in Lippincott's Magazine, vol. vii. p. 357, which was written by his friend Dr. John Graham Palfrey. Besides the works mentioned in vol. I. and some contributions to the North American Review, he published: 1. What makes Slavery a Question of National Concern: a Lecture, Bost., 1855, 8vo. 2. Address at the Opening of the New Town Hall in Braintree, [with an Appendix.] Bost., 1858, 8vo. 3. Life of John Adams. Begun by John Quincy Adams. Phila., 1871, 2 vols. 16mo. (Published originally in Life and Works of John Adams, v. c., ante, vol. I.) "In the compact and attractive form in which the biography now appears apart from the works, it will be likely to have, as it deserves, a wide circulation."—Nation, Address, N. York, 1871, 8vo. 5. An Address on the Life, Character, and Services of W. H. Reward, Albany, 1873, 8vo. 6. (Ed.) Memoirs of John Quincy Adams: comprising Portions of his Diary from 1795 to 1848, Phila., 1874-77, 12 vols. 8vo.

"It is not from a literary point of view that these volumes are to be judged. They are the faithful record of the acts and opinions of a very eminent man during a very remarkable period of history: a period into which more rises and falls of empires and more sudden changes in the fortunes of individuals were crowded together than in any other period since history began. . . . In many of these events Mr. Adams had borne a conspicuous part. With many of the actors he was personally acquainted. Others he had seen at a distance. . . . He had helped make international law, and there was not one of his American colleagues who might not have sat reverently at his feet when he discussed of history."—Nation, xxiii. 288.

valuable documents of our revolutionary history."—

Adams, Charles Francis, second son of the preceding, b. 1825, in Boston; graduated at Harvard College 1846; admitted to the bar 1853; served in the volunteer army throughout the civil war, and was mustered out with the brevet rank of brigadier-general.
In 1869 he was appointed a member of the board of railroad commissioners of Massachusetts; from 1879 to 1882 he was one of the arbitrators of the railroads of the Northern States, becoming in the latter year sole arbitrator; and in 1884 he was elected president of the Union Pacific Railway. 1. The Erie Railroad Row con-

Derby, Vermont; graduated at the University of Michigan in 1861, and was appointed assistant professor of history in 1863, and professor in 1868; elected president of Cornell University, as successor to Dr. Andrew D.
White, in 1885. Besides contributions to periodical literature, he has published: 1. Democracy and Mon- archy in France from the Inception of the Great Revolution to the Overthrow of the Second Empire, N. York, 1871, 8vo.

"Mr. Adams works out his theory with abundant citation of authorities and illustration in a style which is always clear and often impressive, and with a certain air of dogmatic dignity which is perhaps due to the fact that the book originated in a series of college lectures."—Nation,
