MR. C. H. ASHDOWN, Sec.-Treas. of the North
Essex Teachers' Association, says:

"After a careful and thorough examination of THE HELIOTERRA, I find it just the thing for the PUBLIC SCHOOL. One of the strong points in the instrument is, there is not too much of it.

"When I began teaching, a large number of schools were supplied by the Education Department with a MACHINE called THE TELLURIAN. It was fearfully and wonderfully made, consisting of strings, pulleys, cogs, and wheels within wheels. As a toy it was very nice, but for practical teaching it was altogether too complicated. Finding it could be taken apart, I removed everything but the Sun, Earth and Moon, and thus had a suitable instrument for teaching the "first lessons" of mathematical geography. The teachers of the Dominion are to be congratulated in having at their command an instrument that is LOW-PRICED, PRACTICAL and DURABLE. THE HELIOTERRA should be in every public school in the land."
