

PAID ELOQUENT TRIBUTE TO EARL KITCHENER

Mr. W. G. Raymond Delivered Inspiring Address Last Night.

SERVICE HELD IN GRACE CHURCH
The Dead Soldier Leaves Behind Him Example for the Nation.

Of the most solemn and impressive nature was the memorial service conducted last evening in Grace Church, in memory of Lord Kitchener and of the honored dead of the empire. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Mackenzie, who led the congregation in prayers for the realization of our behalf in the war, assisted by Rev. C. Paterson-Smythe, while Mr. W. G. Raymond delivered an address of such power and eloquence as to thrill every listener with the realization of the untimely death of Earl Kitchener, and perhaps in no less measure by the deaths of the gallant sailors and soldiers who have made the supreme sacrifice during the past few days. Mr. Raymond, in referring to Lord Kitchener, most aptly quoted Grey's lines:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power, all that beauty, all that wealth ere gave;
Await alike the inevitable hour,
The path of glory leads but to the grave."

Disarmed by the sudden shock of the loss of this great chief, said Mr. Raymond, we had perhaps believed that our spear point was broken, our sword edge dulled. To yield, in a time as this, to such a feeling of apathy, would be contrary to the dead soldier's wishes. We should spring back to our places, and carry on, resume the fight. Though we mourned the great warrior as the chosen people mourned Moses, who led them to the border of the promised land, a Joshua there might be yet reserved for us, who would lead us into the land of peace and righteousness.

"A SERVANT OF GOD
"In Kitchener," said Mr. Raymond, "we mourn a man who, as a servant of God and his country, nobly did his duty; though taken suddenly, he leaves behind him an example which will inspire the millions whom he enlisted in the service of his country and the Empire. All will be influenced by the tragic manner in which he has been taken from us."
The speaker went on to comment upon the exultation of the enemy, who skulked like prairie grass, exulting over the dead lion. His death should inspire us as the "Jonathan" did David, to the utterance: "Tell it not in Hamburg, publish it not in the streets of Berlin, lest the baby killers and the daughters of the barbarous triumph in it."

No greater evidence of the cowardliness of the German nation was there to be found, declared Mr. Raymond, than their sneers and insults offered to the man whom they feared with such a living. Half a century had Kitchener spent in the service of his country; with single heart and single sword, he would remain always a typical soldier, a model of the army discipline always, to social fetes, he brought only the great object to be attained, and wherever duty led him, he left evidences of the great warrior he had performed for the empire.

ONE OF THE GREATEST.
"He will stand forever" declared the speaker, among our greatest soldiers, whose memories we love and revere." Cromwell, like Kitchener, was a man of single heart and single sword, persevering always in what he saw as his duty. Wolfe, cut off before his career had reached its prime; Nelson, enthusiastic and self-regarding; Wellington, the Iron Duke, the stern disciplinarian. Kitchener shared the qualities of all these, and would go down in history as a martyr of all to be followed by those whom the dead warrior had enlisted to serve their country.

TRIBUTE TO SAILORS
In heroism and patriotism, the British sailors who had lost their lives in the Shagrock battle, and the thousands of Canadians who had made the supreme sacrifice in Flanders, during the past few days in particular, were equal before the throne of God, they would be equal. Our honored dead comprised all who had fallen for the flag, for us and for all we hold dear, and all those who honored accordingly.
That the outcome of the naval battle of 10 days ago, was no worse, was cause for thanks, declared the speaker; Britannia remained mistress of the seas as explained Mr. Raymond, "may she always remain so. It was well at times to commune, as it were, with the spirits of the great patriots we had produced, the great heroes of our race. In this there could be nothing save beneficial inspiration to the spirit of the empire. Kitchener's portrait would be added to the gallery of heroes, and would be the centre of the eyes of the entire army, Imperial Britain, what thou wert, thou art; Kitchener is with thee still." His epitaph might well be "He did his duty."

REDEMPTION BY SACRIFICE.
The sacrifice that our soldiers and our sailors were making in the present great struggle, declared Mr. Raymond, would redeem all their sins, their blood would wash away their stains, and they would be received in the other world by the Lord, who

LIEUT. R. E. WATTS
DIED AT REST
ON SATURDAY

Military Funeral Accorded to Former Officer of the 84th.

The funeral of the late Lieut. R. E. Watts took place on Saturday afternoon with full military honors. At 3 o'clock there was a service in Grace church attended by Lieut. Col. Stewart and officers of the 84th. The directors of the cemetery, Lieut. Col. H. Cocksbutt and officers of the 25th. There was a large attendance of representative citizens of both city and county, including Warden Harris and members of the County Council; Lt.-Col. Cocksbutt, M.P.; Mr. J. H. Fisher, M.P.; County officials, members of the City Council, Archdeacon Mackenzie and Rev. Paterson Smythe. Mr. F. C. Thomas presided at the organ and there was a full choir. The favorite hymns of the deceased were sung:

"On the resurrection morning,
Soul and body meet again,
No more sorrow, no more weeping,
No more pain."
Also, "All things bright and beautiful."

The members of the 125th Battalion were drawn up outside the edifice and at the conclusion of the service, to the strains of funeral music the cortege wended its way to the Farrington cemetery. The coffin draped with the union jack was drawn on a gun carriage and the walls were lined with hundreds of citizens who observed a most reverential attitude, as the solemn way was wended to the spot of interment.

After passing Lorne Bridge the organ was given to quick march. On arriving at the cemetery the members of the regiment opened up and lined each side of the road, while the funeral party passed through the ranks, the men stood resting on their arms reversed.

HIS DEATH LIKE THE FALL OF THE MIGHTY OAK

Rev. L. Brown So Characterizes the Passing of Earl Kitchener.

THE GREATEST MAN OF THE HOUR
To Him the Whole Empire Looked to Give it Victory.

At the First Baptist Church last night Rev. L. Brown paid eloquent tribute to Earl Kitchener and thousands of the departed dead, in a beautiful memorial service, which was largely attended.

It was altogether fitting and right that such a great man as Earl Kitchener should be recognized in a public and solemn way. A great man had fallen. His fall was like the fall of a mighty oak. A great man had fallen, the greatest man of the hour—the one of the greatest men England ever produced. The whole Empire seemed to turn to Earl Kitchener as the one man in whose ability it trusted, and under the blessing of God, to give it victory. His personality was so great that in the scale of public judgment what he said and did seemed to outbalance all others. The king, the parliament and the people listened to him. But one must not forget the thousands and tens of thousands who like Earl Kitchener, have died nobly in the service of their country. He should honor, declared the preacher, all men in a few hours after reaching on the battlefield or under the sea have given their lives for the cause of freedom. We all stand indebted to them and succeeding generations would call them blessed.

The year 1916 will stand out in the memory of Britons as the year in which Kitchener died. Seldom in the history of the nation has so much sorrow been caused by the death of one man. In a few hours after reaching the news, the whole nation was trembling with grief and excitement. Because of the terrible crisis the Empire faces, because of the great work he was doing because he was the hero of the nation, the wise counsellor, the man most feared by the enemy; his death was startling in the extreme. Some consolation could be found. Before he died he had created an enormous army of five million men, and had given it already the swing of victory.

Mr. Brown then extolled some characteristics of the great soldier. It was his fidelity to duty that led to his high office by work. It was the sense of the greatness of his work that gave him his character. He was essentially a man of action. He was not only a great soldier but a great ruler, statesman, administrator and colonizer. Furthermore he was thorough. He created confidence and exercised a power over his fellow-countrymen which is seldom exercised. The thoroughness of his work could be seen in his day in Egypt, in India and in South Africa.

"Who could tell," said Mr. Brown, "what he had accomplished for Britain's army? He saw at the outset the war would be long and he planned for a long war. He died a soldier's death in the North Sea, and was privileged to sacrifice his life for his country."
The musical part of the service was very fine and in keeping with the character of the sermon.
The choir sang as an introit before the service, "Gently Lord, O Gently, Lead Us," by Holley. Later on it sang, unaccompanied, "Crossing the Bar" (Nevin) with very fine effect. Mr. Halrod sang with splendid voice "Abide With Me" (Liddle). At the conclusion of the service Mrs. Arthur Second sang "O Dry Those Tears" (Del Reigo). The whole audience then stood while the organist played "Lead March from Saul" (Handel).

D. F. Boyden, an artist, formerly of New York, was accidentally shot by his eight-year-old daughter, at Meredith, N.H.
Lippincott's department store, the largest in Wilmington, Del., was destroyed by fire, the estimated loss being about $400,000.

UNIQUE RALLY FOR RECRUITS SATURDAY NIGHT

Bantams Solicit Men at Meeting on Market Square.

215th ALSO PUT IN CLAIM
As a Result Each Had One Man Added to Their Strength.

Two recruits were obtained on Saturday evening through an open air recruiting rally staged by the local members of the 215th Battalion on the Market square. The piano mounted upon a truck was provided for the occasion, and Lt. McKissock, accompanied by the piano by Mr. Clifford Higgin, sang the battalion song, "When the Bantams Roosters Crow." A large crowd was by now in attendance, and loud applause greeted the singer. Lt. Walsh of the Hamilton depot, of the Bantams then addressed the gathering, dwelling upon the momentous events of the last ten days, the great naval battle, the great defensive fighting done by the Canadians and in the wake of these, the death of Kitchener. No one, cautioned the speaker should be discouraged by these occurrences; we should only take warning from them and hasten to do our bit for the Empire. Lieut. Walsh expressed the opinion that to obtain the half million men required from Canada, every able-bodied man from 18 to 30, at least, would be required; since these were not responding to the call, it would prove necessary to summon the older men, men with wives and families. Sixty per cent. of the men now enlisting were married men, stated the speaker. He went on to point out that to all men under the regulation army height, men who had previously been unable to enlist. Comment was also made on the excellent reputation the English Bantam battalions had earned at the front.

At the close of Lt. Walsh's appeal one recruit responded, to join the local squad of the 215th. Sgt. Major Eccles of the 215th then addressed the gathering, briefly and in his usual forceful manner, voicing the call from the boys in the trenches to all who had not yet enlisted, and urging them to hasten and don the khaki, in the 215th of the Bantam battalion, according to their height. "It is a reflection upon your own manhood," declared the speaker, "who has seen fighting already at the front and returned gassed and wounded, 'if you remain home in this time of stress.'"
The speaker paid tribute to the splendid response which Brant county had made since the outbreak of the war, voicing the sentiment that had the whole of Canada done as well, there would be no need of holding recruiting meetings. Yet there were still men here who could enlist, who should enlist in the end if they did not do so voluntarily. "If the members of Kitchener will not inspire you to enlist," demanded Sgt. Major Eccles, "a second recruit responded to the speaker's appeal, following which the meeting was brought to a close. Though rain had been falling for some time, the crowd remained to listen to the energetic speeches delivered.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY BY COUNTY COUNCIL

Expressed Regret at Deaths of Lieut. R. E. Watts and C. C. Wright.

At a special meeting of the county council held Saturday afternoon, resolutions of sympathy were passed in connection with the recent deaths of County Constable Wright and Lieut. R. E. Watts, son of County Clerk A. E. Watts, Mr. J. A. Smith, clerk of Brantford Township, officiated as clerk at the meeting. The text of the resolutions follows:
Moved by Mr. Burris, seconded by Mr. Greenwold: That this council desires to place on record their deep regret at the death of Mr. Alexander Wright who for some time has filled the position of county constable with great ability. The council feel that the efficient manner in which he performed his duties, and his faithfulness as a public officer will long be cherished by those with whom he was associated.

To the widow and family, this council extends their sincere sympathy in the great loss they have sustained.
Moved by Mr. Evans, seconded by Mr. Aitken: That this council desires to place on record their deep regret at the death of Lieut. R. E. Watts. His early response to the call of his country, and his death while equipping himself properly to serve her, entitles him to the same regard as those whose lives have been given on the country's altar, while actually fighting her foes. His courage in responding as he did and the desire to return to his duties, is evidence of courage and devotion which will be an inspiration that will radiate further than can be calculated. May this council, on behalf of its individual members and the municipality it represents tenders its most heartfelt sympathy.

Copies of these resolutions were forwarded to the families of the late Mr. Wright and the late Lt. Watts respectively.
