SOUTH BUXTON.

This village has been sleeping for some time, but the prospect of the new radial railway seems to have added new life, and the coming of Rev. Mr. Mowatt to St. Andrew's church seems to have awakened new vigor to the congregation and is the source of much rejoicing. Mr. Mowatt seems to be endowed with great power of magnetism.

Mr. A. Ray and son are preparing to build a new dwelling.
Mr. S. Givings is drawing sand, looking to a walk under his barn. Also Mr. J. Sutor and others.
Mr. E. H. Broadbent has engaged with B. G. Burk as clerk, and now his old friends are gathering in to greet him.

Mrs. Mowatt has gone to Merriton to the bedside of her father, who is very aged.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Conley and family, of Battersdown, were callers on Miss C. M. Hill Saturday.

Miss Mary Garel, of Chatham, is visiting under the old parental roof. Ella Pratt, who has been confined to her room with scarlet fever, is recovering.
Washington Lodge, No. 6397, G. U. O. of O. F. North Buxton, is proving to be a live lodge. They have now 34 members and new ones have been coming in almost every meeting. They are purchasing a lot on which to erect a hall this season. The regular meetings are Wednesday of each week at seven p. m.

STRICTURE AND KIDNEY DISEASE CURED.

"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I had an uncomfortable shooting pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the urethra. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Drs. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. Had heard great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I am delighted with the results. In one week I felt better and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."

HUMOR

FOLLOWED HER CUE.

She Asked No Questions Not Suggested by the Conversation.

When the elderly aunt was here she was invited out to dinner with the family and had no thought of refusing. She has a heart in her as big as the proverbial Yankee cheese, but, by way of comparison, her bump of inquisitiveness is as large as the new county building. That is why the nephew had a little private talk with her.

"You see, auntie," he began diplomatically, "it is different in the city. There is not the same freedom of speech among friends and neighbors. We are more conservative, as it were."

"Don't gossip as much, you mean," her nose and chin rising in unison. "You think I'm grass fed, as some of you metropolitans people of culture and refinement put it. I'll not disgrace you, Tommy. I'll ask no questions that are not suggested by the conversation. Is that a safe rule?"

"Perfectly, auntie. Pardon me for thinking that I might give you a hint."

"Worked splendidly," the aunt reported after the affair was over. "I had heard you talking over a good many reports about those people you know, so I knew how to set my stakes. When he told me he had made a pile on stocks I asked him if he had any idea of settling up the debts he ran away from down in New Jersey. You never see a man get so red, and he changed in a wink to talking about his family. 'Is it true,' says I, 'this scandalous report that you and your wife were both divorced before you married each other?'"

"Heavens!"

"I thought he was going into a con- punction, but I talked sympathetic and told him that the world wouldn't care how much he owed or how many previous wives or husbands there was now that he is rich. That did the business, for he told me in the pleasantest way that people who had never married were the best judges of such matters and said he was sorry that he and his family would be unable to see any more of me while I'm here. I knew I could take care of myself."

There was nothing for the nephew to do but groan until he got to the basement, where he could say things out loud to himself.

A Ghastly Excuse.
That men grow callous in the discharge of routine duties is exemplified in the story of the trained nurse who lay across the feet of his patient smoking a long black cigar with great relish. The patient, recovering from a swoon, looked down at his attendant and said:

"Hey! What are you doing down there lying on my feet?"

"I beg your pardon," replied the nurse, scrambling to his feet. "I thought you were dead."

Second Artist—Oh, splendid. Got a commission this morning for a million- aire. Wants his children painted very badly.

Quite an Estate.
The Gorilla—Did you hear about the demise of poor Mr. Ostreich?

The Hippo—Why, no. Did he leave his wife anything?

The Gorilla—Yes, she took all the articles found in his stomach and opened a department store.

Recommendation.
Mr. Oilroll—Is Squirreling a good lawyer?

Mr. Beefwad—Fine. He can steer you closer to the penitentiary without getting you in than any lawyer in town.

An Influence.
"Do you know anything about the Count Fucash's family tree?"

"No," answered Miss Cayenne. "Judging from his jewelry and court decorations, it might have been a Christmas tree."

Such Is Love.
Maiden Aunt—Good gracious, Gladys, I shouldn't think anybody would ever ask for a hand that couldn't write better than you do.

Gladys—Well, you see, since I gave it away I've lost all control over it.

Bigger, but Smaller.
Harry—James made a big pile of rocks with that little self of his.

John—Yes, and he's got a bigger pile now and a smaller cell.—Judge.

A most curious and sluggish creature is the tautawa, a nine inch lizard whose home is in New Zealand. This little imitation saurian has the reputation of being the laziest creature ever created. He is usually found clinging to rocks or logs along the shores of rivers and lakes and has been known to remain in one position perfectly motionless for many months. How the creature manages to exist is a mystery.

THE FAIRY TALE.

A Protest From Lady Warwick Over Its General Abolition.

Lady Warwick is lifting her voice in protest against the general abolition of the fairy tale. She has sent the following letter to The London Daily Mail:

Sir,—May I plead for the children whom the Duchess of Somerset would rob of the fairy tales? I read in The Daily Mail a few days ago that the Duchess visited the village school of Malden Bradley, and was shocked to find that the children were reading fairy tales of the type of "The Sleeping Beauty." The Duchess condemned the tales as nonsense, and said that the children ought instead to be reading about Julius Caesar and other great men.

May I point out that fairy stories like "The Sleeping Beauty" are not nonsense, but contain lessons of great value for children? The moral sense in a child may best be reached by stimulating the imagination, and this you will never do by ramming down its throat facts about Julius Caesar. You must give rein to a child's imagination to develop its intellect, and this can be done by the better done by the fairy story than by dates and the dry bones of history.

It seems to me that in the fairy story is distilled the wisdom of countless generations in teaching the child the first great lessons of life. There is many a child who will in after life trace its first awakening to the love of the unselfish and the heroic from the fairy story. Every one of us is a "Sleeping Beauty." It depends how long the sleep lasts, and how strong the dream grows. But the awakening comes to all. To a few by a real "Prince Charming," to others by a rousing from the selfishness and ignorance hedging every life before knowledge comes.

What do so many of such stories teach if it is not the beauty of helping others in distress? Every child may be a knight errant—and it is this spirit of knight-errantry that is taught by so many of these despised fairy stories.

What better moral could be drawn from any story than that of "Cinderella?" No child with any imagination could be unkind to its step-sister or brother after reading "Cinderella." Or take the story of Jack the Giant Killer, "The Ugly Duckling," "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," "Puss in Boots," as only a few whose moral is obvious, and it would be difficult to teach a child these lessons by reading to it the "Conquest of Gaul."

What should we all do in after life without imagination? Without it we should miss the mystery and the wonder of life. I wonder how many of us owe this second sight, this "inward eye" which is the bliss of solitude, to the first awakening of our imagination under the influence of the fairy tale? It seems to me that the world would be many more people condemned to grope their way blindly through life, like weary prisoners shut in by prison walls, if their imaginations had not been stirred by the fairy stories of their childhood. This applies far more to the child who is brought up in surroundings of poverty, where there is nothing to feed, everything to deaden the imagination.

I am glad to see the London County Council is wise enough to understand the value of the fairy story in its infant schools, and I hope that the children of the M. C. R. Bradley School will not be obliged, after the Duchess's remarks, to read Julius Caesar instead of "The Sleeping Beauty."

EARNED THE REWARD.

When Ramsay, the Poet, Proved Equal to the Occasion.

When Allan Ramsay, the poet, was still an obscure young man and a wig-maker he once fell behind with his rent, and, as ill luck would have it, he came blundering upon the laird on the very day when he least wished to see him. The dreadful subject of "The rent" came immediately on the carpet, and Ramsay, with shame and grief, confessed his inability to satisfy his creditor.

To his great relief, however, the laird expressed perfect indifference about the matter, for, having observed Ramsay's genius, he was unwilling to distress him for so paltry a sum, which he could so easily afford to remit. He even went the length of saying that if Ramsay in as many minutes could give him a rhyming answer to the questions which he would ask he would quit him of his rent altogether as a reward for so much quickness of mind. Allan professed his willingness to try, and a watch being laid upon the table the laird propounded his questions, which were: "What does God love? What does the devil love? What does the world love? What do I love?" The poet, within the specified time gave the proper answer, as follows: God loves man when he refrains from sin; The devil loves man when he persists therein; The world loves man when riches are him flow; And you'd love me could I pay what I owe.

A Brother Scot.
Admiral Coghlan was the leading humorist at the banquet to Admiral Battenberg in New York. He lent gaiety to the post-prandial ceremonies by telling a story quite apropos of international brotherhood. Two Scotchmen had been out late and were getting home. One of them stumbled, fell into a ditch, and couldn't get up.

"Andy," said he, "will ye help me out?"

"Sandy," said Andy, "I canna help ye out, but I'll lie doon wi' ye."

An Appetizer.
Dooflicker, the author, was invited to dine with a wealthy banker at home. Arriving somewhat early, he amused himself with the prattle of his host's little daughter. "Well, Elsie," said the guest, "since you know my name, perhaps you can tell me who I am."

"Oh, yes, sir," replied Elsie readily: "I heard mamma tell auntie that we were to have another half-starved little genius to dinner."—London Answer.

Red Rose Tea Uniformity

A TEA that is good to-day and poor to-morrow is unreliable.

Have you ever noticed variations in the quality of the tea you use? One package good, the next bitter, herby, perhaps weak and insipid.

A lack of expert knowledge by the tasters and blenders of that tea produced that result. There was a failure at a vital point, an ignorance of combining qualities in teas, poor judgment in the blending of that maker's teas, a weakness which invariably gives just such results as your poor tea.

Every chest of Red Rose Tea is tested at the gardens, again by the Eastern Red Rose shippers, then at the Red Rose warehouse upon its arrival before blending; after that an experimental blend is tested, and the final or actual blend is also tested before being packed.

Nothing is left to chance.

That is why that "rich fruity flavor" is always present in Red Rose tea.
