Swinging Bridge.

BY EMMA HOWARD WRIGHT.

Upon the following morning, John Graham came into the dining-room where his daughter was laying the cloth for dinner, looking very grave.

"Mary," he said, "Stephen Pearson was arrested by the revenue officers last night."

"The girl gave a great start and turned a very pale face toward her father."

"Stephen arrested!" she murmured.

"It is true," John Graham declared. "He was caught by the revenue officers at the old distillery on the mountain where every preparation had been made for distilling. There was no one there but Stephen. I suppose the officers must have gotten wind that the others intended making a raid. Stephen Pearson is the last fellow in the world I would have suspected of being a moonshiner. I always believed him to be the soul of honor and honesty."

"That is what every one thought," the girl said, mechanically. "She had turned again to her work, but her hands trembled as she placed the dishes on the table."

"They have taken him to jail," John Graham added. "Later he will, of course, be tried."

"Mary shuddered. She came and stood by her father, lifting her eyes to his face."

"Father, do you believe that Stephen is guilty?" she asked.

"I would not have believed it if he hadn't been caught in the act, so to speak," John Graham replied. "But, as it is, there is nothing else to believe."

"But why should he be guilty of such a thing?" the girl cried, with sudden passion.

"I suppose she is concerned about this on Ernest's account," her father thought as he glanced rather questioningly at her white face. "It is difficult to say why he was guilty of such a thing," he said, aloud. "He is certainly not in need of money. I am very sorry, for I both liked and respected Stephen Pearson."

"Mary turned slowly away."

"I must go and see about the dinner," she said, and went out of the room.

"She seems mighty cut up over this," John Graham mused. "I wonder if she considers it a disgrace that will reflect on Ernest."

"As Mary passed out of the dining-room, Ernest came in at the front door. She stopped and waited for him to approach. For a moment they looked at each other in silence. Ernest was the first to speak.

"Have you heard about Stephen?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied, "I have heard."

"He took her hand and looked at her pleadingly. His handsome, boyish face had a pale, worn look."

"You won't think any less of me because of this, will you, Mary?" he asked.

"No, why should I?" she answered. "You are in no way responsible for anything he may have done."

"He dropped her hand and shook back a quiver passing over his face. She looked at him and something like a sob rose in her throat."

"This is hard on you," she murmured, "for you—love him."

"Love him!" he repeated, brokenly. "Love him!"

"There was silence for some moments, then Ernest lifted his eyes and looked at Mary. She was very pale and there was a look of pathos in her brown eyes, but never before had she appeared so beautiful and so desirable."

"I cannot lose her," he told himself, desperately. "I cannot."

"From the time he could remember, Stephen had stood between him and the girl of his life. He knew that if he remained silent, Stephen would bear the burden of the guilt that was his. He had always taken Stephen's affection, his care, his thought for him as a matter of course, as a selfish nature like his was wont to take such things. But this was different, this he could not take as a matter of course, for it meant so much to Stephen, the loss of his good name before the world, imprisonment."

Stephen again shook his head.

"No, I shall not require a lawyer," he said, and the sheriff saw that he really meant what he said.

"Well, of course, you know your own business best," with a shrug of the shoulders, as he turned to go out. "But it strikes me you are acting somewhat foolishly."

A faint smile crossed Stephen's lips as the heavy door banged to after the burly form of the sheriff. He wondered, with a touch of dreary humor, what that practical, matter-of-fact individual would say if he knew the truth.

The real door was opened again and Peter entered by the sheriff.

"The darky came slowly forward, his wistful, pathetic eyes fixed upon Stephen's face."

Stephen arose and held out his hand.

"Peter" he said, smiling a little. "Massa, my dear young massa. Pete murmured, clinging to Stephen's hand and speaking in a voice broken and unsteady with emotion, 'what you doing in de dish place?'

"I am keeping a promise," made to the dead, Pete, replied Stephen.

"A promise made to the dead?" repeated Pete, bewilderedly.

"Yes, Pete," Stephen paused, and then continued: "I never knew a mother's love and care until my father brought home, to Swinging-bridge Farm, Ernest's mother. She gave me both. I grew to love her almost as much as I would have loved my own mother had she been spared to me. When my stepmother lay dying, I promised her that Ernest's happiness and welfare should be my first care in life, my first thought, that I would be patient and forbearing with him, that I would stand between him and sorrow, trouble and evil. He paused a moment, then added quietly: 'Now you understand, Pete, why I am—here.'"

"Yes, Massa Stephen, I understand," Pete replied. "I knowed at first dat you war taking ob de blame what done belonged to Mist' Ernest, and when granny done took on powerful, howing dat disgrace done come to de good ole massa, it war jest all I could do to keep from telling her de truth. It am a dreadful thing, Massa Stephen, for folks to believe dat you done bring disgrace on de name ob Pearson."

A quiver of pain passed over Stephen's face. He walked once or twice up and down the narrow limits of the cell, while Pete watched him with great wistful eyes. When he passed again beside the darky, Stephen was quite calm.

"It is true, what you say, Pete," he said. "It is a dreadful thing for disgrace to come upon the name of Pearson."

"Den, young massa," Pete held out his hand with an appealing gesture, "don't let disgrace come on de good ole name."

Stephen sank down upon the cot as though he were very weary.

"I must, Pete. I cannot break my promise to the dead."

"If you done made up your mind to dat, Massa Stephen, den dat ain't no use for me to say no more!" Pete declared, hopefully. "You nobber war one ob de kind to change your mind when once you set your harte to do anything. Mist' Ernest, he ax me what I gwine to do about dis deah matter. I tote him I gwine to do what my young massa tote me."

Stephen arose and laid his hand on Pete's shoulder.

"And he tells you, Pete, to remain silent to keep the truth forever locked in that faithful heart of yours."

Pete's head sank on his breast.

"Yes, massa," he murmured. "Later when Pete had gone and he was alone in his cell, Stephen thought to himself:

"I am not alone keeping my promise to the dead, but is bearing his guilt, standing between her and sorrow. A great tenderness stole into his eyes. 'She loves him. It will matter but little to her about me; she would break her heart if it were Ernest. O my darling! with sudden passion, 'you have never guessed, you will never know how dearly I love you!'

The glow from the setting sun gave a deeper tint to the richly colored leaves, and a lurid glare to the rent-lens waters of the creek. The mountain was purple where the shadows lay, and touched with gold and crimson in the sunlight.

Ernest stood upon the swinging-bridge looking toward the ford.

Be Somebody.

The world is wide. If you wish to be somebody "pitch in." The brave always have friends. Where others have gone you can go. If the old track doesn't suit you make a new one; someone will walk in it. Don't hurry too fast, especially till you know the road or become acquainted with your team. Mind your own business and look after it yourself. Don't stop to gossip. You may grow weary, but remember this is not a world of ease and rest. Live beyond your means. Success is never obtained in a country like this without effort. If you fail once, try again. If you fall down get up. If it is dark strike a light. If in the shade, move around; if there is a shade on one side there is sure to be sunshine on the other. It takes longer to skin an elephant than a mouse, but the skin is worth something. Never be content with doing what another has done—seek him. A trade is a good thing to have—it is better than gold—brings a larger premium, but to a premium the trade must be perfect. Determine in your mind to be a good workman. Never slip your work. Every job you do in a sign. Poor signs are against success. People always speak well of a man who minds his own business, and who seems disposed to be somebody. This is a queer world; many people are watching us, and help often comes when and from whom we least expect. Confidence is the safe in which men often deposit rich treasures, and as you prove worthy so will your reward of success be.—Canadian Workman.

Help for Those Who Have Stomach Trouble.

After doctoring for about twelve years for a bad stomach trouble, and spending nearly five hundred dollars for medicine and doctors' fees, I purchased my wife one box of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which did her so much good that she continued to use them and they have done her more good than all of the medicine I bought before.—Samuel Boyer, Folsom, Iowa. This medicine is for sale by Rand's Drug Store. Samples free.

It is In Bad Form.

Words of Caution to Young Mothers.

Mothers must keep guard over the health of their little ones during the summer months. Summer is an anxious time for all mothers, but especially for young mothers. It is the most fatal time of the year for babies and young children. It is then that stomach and bowel troubles come almost without warning, and often before the mother realizes there is any danger the little one may be beyond aid. The mother must take strict caution to keep her little one's stomach pure and sweet and the bowels moving regularly. No other medicine can do this so quickly and thoroughly as Baby's Own Tablets. The tablets should always be kept in the house. An occasional dose will keep baby well or if illness comes on suddenly the Tablets will quickly remove the cause and make baby well and happy. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Needless Slaughter.

Thousands of skylarks are being slaughtered in the United States and in Canada every day to satisfy the demands of millions who are using them to decorate the bows of Chamberlain's, The Audubon Society, which has entered a vigorous protest, points out that these little birds, which bring fifty cents in the millinery market, are sworn foes of the insects which destroy grain trucks. These bugs, when unchecked, do millions of dollars of damage to the growing crops, as an agent of the society, and farmers in the districts where the skylarks are being slaughtered confirm the statement.

Sour Cream Pie.

1 cup sour cream, 1-2 cup seeded mince, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 3 yolks of eggs, 1 white of egg. Bake like lemon pie, using the whites of two eggs, with two table-spoons sugar. Put on after pie is baked and brown in oven. If not liked that way, stir all three whites in together before baking.

Good coffee means a good breakfast.

Nothing takes its place. Nothing tastes so good. Estabrook's Coffee has the vigorous strength and delicate richness which brightens and satisfies the appetite. Clears the brain. A good starter for the day.

Laid Up With Lame Back

Pain, helplessness and suffering are overcome by DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Mrs. Frank Bloom, Hardwood Lake, Ont., writes: "I want to tell you of the great benefit I found in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered so badly with kidney disease that when I lay down I could not get up without help. I was completely laid up with lame back, and I read about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the paper, got them and they cured me of kidney disease and backache."

"My husband had dreadful pains in his side and obtained relief by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These pills are the best on the market and I can give the best of evidence. I am glad to recommend them."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a definite and certain in action, relieve the liver and bowels as well as the kidneys, are largely beneficial and economical. Get the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 30 cents a box, at all dealers, or Ed. Simmons, Halifax & Co., Toronto.
