THE NEWSFAPER.—In no other way can so much, so varied, so useful information be imparted, and under circumstances so fa-vourshile for educating the child's mind, as through judicious, well-conducted newspapers. To live in a village, was, once, to be shat up and contracted. But now a man may be a hermit and yet a cosmopelite. He may live in the forests, walking miles to a post office, having a mail but once a week, and yet he shall be found as familiar with the living world as the basiest actor in it! For, the newspaper is a spy glass by which he brings near the most distant things; — a microscope by which he brings near the most distant things; an increace all of the shall be found as familiar with the living world as the basiest actor in it! The effect, in liber-alizing and emlarging the mind of the young, of this weekly com-marce with the world, will be apparent to any one who will ponder it. Once, a liberal elacation could only be completed by foreign travel. The sense only of the wealthy could indulgs in this cosly as, a hundred years ago, a gentleman could learn by journeying the world, it is the poor man's privileges to have the world couse to see him. The sensepaper is a great Collector, a great Traveller, a great Lecturer. It is the common popole's Encyclopedia—the Ly-coum, the College!—Rev. H. W. Beecher.

A PLACE FOR EVERY THING AND EVERY THING IN ITS PLACE.—' That's old; I have seen it before a great many times.' So asys a young friend. Very well. But have you learned it? ' Learned it? How could I help learning it, when I have read it, and heard it, repeated so often. It's as familiar as A, B, C.' All that may be, and yet you may not have learned it. Nothing is well hearned, itill you have learned it practically. You have not master-ed a rule in the Arithmetic, when you have committed it to memory. that may be, and yet you may not have terried it. Nothing is well learned, if ill you have learned it gractically. You have not unsater-ed a rule in the Arithmetic, when you have committed it to memory. You must learn to do the -uns. What I would know is, whether you gractize this rule. I should like to look in upon you now and see. There is a hook for every article of your clothing: a place for your books, and a drawer for your papers. Bull find a garment on the floor, another on a chair, your book-case topy tary, some books standing on their heads, others aboved in with their titles to the wall; some laid on the tops of the row, so that, when you go to take out one, it will tumble down.—And the table and floor are takes out one, it will tumble down. and the holes and floor a strewed with papers. And if I follow about the house, I find it just so with every thing you attempt to do. Whatever article you take in your hand, somehow contracts your barots, and lose its way, so as meyer to get back to its place, till some one else comes along and show at the way home. Thus, you make your parents more work to regulate things after yon, than all you do for them. Now consider how much happier you would feel, to go into your room and always find every thing in is order. It would diffue an air of cheerfulness around it, that would actually cure you of the '' sulke.'' And if you prize the approbation of your parents, you adways find every thing after you now get five frowns, it they would always find every thing after you in its place. And all these advan-tages you would get for nothing; for it does not take as much time to pat things in their places, whenever you use them, as it does to threw them down, and thus have every thing to pat to rights. You would alw hear marcuically, '' that order is Heapsen's first law.'' Will you try!

 best out of the second s To M. W. Skinner, Agent for S. P. Townsend's Saraaparilla. Stra; This is to certify that I was, for this last 12 months, troubled with Fits; and, from their very severe attacks, thought each one would terminate my existence; and, in addition to the Fits, I was reduced to a mere akeleton, and was extremely weak and nervous. I heard a great deal about S. P. Townsend's Saraaparila, for which you are Agent. I was advised to try it. And strange and wonderful to re-late, before using the contents of one bottle, was greatly benefited. Indeed, so rapid and effectual was the euror, that it appeared to me to be almost miraculous. And I think that, in justice to the public and suffering humanity, I am bound to make the above statement, and say, that a greater bleasing, in my opinion, than S. P.
