AN IRISH EVICTION.—Intense excitement existed lately in and about Milford, in con sequence of the summary ejection of the widow Algoe and her two sons from the house and farm at Bunlin, near Milford, from which evening Captain Doppin, agent to the Earl of evening Captain Doppin, agent to the Earl of Leitrim, accompanied by several bailiffs, pro-ceeded to the house occupied by Mrs. Algoe and her two sons. A bailiff named Harrison broke open the door with a crowbar, and a rush was made into the house by the other bailiffs in a body. They were opposed by entering, but after a desperate resistance they were overpowered, and, long with the mother, ejected. The house remained in the occupation of several bailiffs, well armed. Robert and John Algoe were arrested by the
