A LONDON WEDDING.

ome New and Wonderful Gowns for Ladies Exhibited. The attire of the city dames was gorgeous, assure you. We had a good opportunity noting each costume as its wearer appeared. glanced with disappointment down the already filled front seats, and then subsided nto some dim retreat where the glories of ner toilet blushed unseen. Three dresser were really excellent. One was a French sprigged muslin with coloured flowers painted printed upon it, made with great skill and worn by a very graceful woman. The cream-coloured lace on the skirt was not overdone—a frequent fault. There was just enough of it to relieve the colour of the muslin. Long loops of bright, golden-brown satin ribbon held the draperies on the skirt and fastened the pretty fichu cape that supplemented the bodice. A very small, close bonnet of cream-coloured network, just the tint of the ground of the French muslin, was tied with ribbon strings of satin like that on the skirt. A soft aigrette gave it an air o NOTHER VERY PRETTY AND LADYLIKE DRESS was of brown brocade in a very rich, deep shade, the edge being cut out in tabs which fell over a flounce of lovely yellowish lace; that in its turn hanging over a satin plaiting. The hodice or polonaise matched in style of trimming, and the bonnet, with its tints o ream and brown, harmonized pleasantly with the soft grey hair but youthful face of the The third well-thought-out dress was worn by the Lord Mayoress. It was of ruby velvet, the front being trimmed with panels of lace and gold-coloured satin. The train was immensely long, and if it be true, as some one has asserted, that a woman's perception and apprehensions reach to the extreme end of her balayeuse, I wonder the Lady Mayorss was not more nervous than she seemed t MANY OF THE GOWNS WERE SPOILED w being tilted up short at the back, or b

by being too short in front, a most ungraceful defect in a dress. Others were bunched unduly on the hips, making the wearers look panier-laden. An otherwise pretty grey dress was spoiled in this way. A peacock blue vicugna and plush was better managed, and a bunch of pale pink and white blosso looked lovely against it.

Some one laid down a great bunch of yellow roses against the dark brown carved oak of one of the stalls, and you cannot think how beautiful they made each other look—blos-soms and oaks. I could not help fancying that perhaps the touch of the flowers might awaken in the wood the memory of the time when it was a tree, with all its branche waving in the wind—how long ago?

The bride looked very girlish and simple in her snowy draperies. The eight bridesmaids were also in snowdrop white, their dresses being of white silk broche worn over lace skirts. Pretty wreaths of autumn-tinted creeper were arranged in their hair, suiting dark locks as well as fair. Tulle veils fell over their heads. Sprays of similiar leaves were fastened on their bedices, and autumnal foliage was mingled with the bouquets they carried. When the bridal group stood on the altar steps, the sun shining upon them, the effect was extremely good.

The two child bridesmaids-now so stereo typed a part of the wedding ceremony that a bride of to-day would scarcely consider her-self legally married without them—also wore wreaths and tulle veils, and appeared to be much incommoded by the baskets of flowers they carried, which were rather large for suc

One of the Benefits of Marrying a Fat

Reference was made a short time since to the romantic marriage of Mr. Moses to the fat girl of a Bowery museum. It was charming to think of their coy courtship, their rapturous honeymoon, and to picture the gallant youth trying to circle the waist of his Gargantuan bride. But earthly joy is transient. "This world is all a fleeting show for man's illusion given," and before the first ecstacy of love's young dream had become clouded by the realities of practical life, Mrs. Moses obeyed the inevitable summons of that dread messenger who treads with impartial feet the hovels of the poor and the palaces of the great. Poor young Moses! In the depth of his woe, in the utter abandonment of his grief, he had one ray of comfort, one throb of consolation. As soon as his wife was dead he incontinently went and soid her body for dissection to a medical college.

Train Wrecked and Robbed on the Southern Pacific. SOCORRO, N. M., Nov. 25,-News reached here to-night of a train wrecking and robbery four miles east of Gage station, thirteen mile west of Deming. An east-bound Southern Pacific passenger train passed about five o'clock this afternoon, and was stopped by seven cowboys, who opened fire on the train. About twenty shots were fired. Webster, the engineer, was killed. The robbers removed the plate and spread the rails, throwing the engine, mail car, one coach, and the front and of a sleeping car from the track. A brakesman who escaped brought in the first account, which was very meavre. The robpers hung around the wreck until night, and then left, taking about $700 from the express car. Full particulars have not been arned, as the train has not reached Deming. The commanding officer has been telegraphe None of the passengers were hart.

Macon, Ga., Nov. 22.—Some horrible evidences of coloured depravity have been furnished in the past week. In Calboun county Friday afternoon, as Ben J. Harper was in the woods, his attention was drawn t a flock of buzzards, and going up to see what they had found, discovered a live coloured child, which had evidently been born in the woods and abandoned by its mother. The buzzards had just made the discovery, as their damage to the child had been slight. It was taken to a house pear by, and its mother subsequently found. In the same county another was found in the woods near Harris' place while being deyoured by buzzards. The child was not dea when found, but would cry when pierced by the beaks of the carrion birds. The annea ance of buzzards and cries of the infant were the means of its discovery. The mother of the iniant, Mary Ann Sadberry, left it to be devoured in the woods immediately after giving birth to it. Neither mother nor child ca ive long. The mother has been arrested.

Another of the old landmarks has been re moved by the death of Peter Cober, at the old homestead, third concession of Vaughan, at the advanced age of 83 years. His parents emigrated to Canada from Pennsylvania, and were the fifth family that settled on Yonge street above Toronto, on the second farm north of Thornhill English church. They were of German descent. At the age of 26 years Peter was converted, and soon after he united with the Church known as Tunkards, or Brethren. He was soon after elected to the ministry and some years after as bishop or elder. He was a faithful pioneer preacher of the Gospel, travelling over hills and valleys on horseback, and on foot over rough bush roads without the slightest pecuniary remunera-tion. He was looked up to as a father among his own denomination in Canada, and was deeply loved by the congregation in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana, which he often visited. nearly filled with blasting powder and gun cotton, covered with scrap iron, with a inse at the bottom. The second was a large tin cooking utensil similarly prepared. It is reported that the machines were intended to blow up the German embassy.

Wolff is a chemist, and one of the leading Socialists of the metropolis. The machines were fitted with time fuses. There were ten pounds of explosive matter in each machine. Wolff is reported to be of German or Polish extraction, and has been engaged for some time at the waxwork exhibition of the Royal Aquarium. A violent explosion occurred four months ago at his residence, which he reported as an explosion of gas.

Wolff was arraigned in court subsequently, charged with knowingly having in his possession explosives for unlawful purposes. The prisoner asked for a German interpreter. Superintendent Williamson deposed for the prisoner asked for the prison Superintendent Williamson deposed that the prisoner had the infernal machines and was unable to give a satisfactory reason for the possession thereof. A policeman testified that the prisoner started to run whenshe was approached. There were also found in his lodgings fourteen empty cans such as are used for powder and some documents, including a letter to Count von Munster, the cluding a letter to count von Munster, the German ambassador, which says :—"If you wish freedom you must give us equality." It is signed "Proletarian." The prisoner said the things found must have been placed there by a Frenchman. He was remanded.

A Frenchman named Bolderane gave the police information which led to Wolff's arrest.

It is considered certain that the infernal machines found in Wolff's house at Westminster would have been used against the German Embassy in London a few hours after the arrest was made. They would have produced an effect similar to what occurred at the underground railway explosion at Praed street a few weeks since.
