

MY COLUMN

(By the Club-Editor.)
IT SERVES ME RIGHT.

When I first announced that I was going to answer all questions asked through this column, I little thought that I would receive letters asking answers to such preposterous questions as some of those that have reached me. I have managed, however, to survive up to the present, but the last question put to me made me feel that I was in a great deal of trouble. I shall never be able to understand for the first time I read the letter which reached me on the spot, and I have been thinking for several hours. I am sure I have thought of many things, but I don't want to be the cause of any bereavements. I am sure that I shall never be able to understand for the first time I read the letter which reached me on the spot, and I have been thinking for several hours. A PALPABLE HIT.

The anti-vegetarian was arguing that while a glass of buttermilk may be as nourishing as a half dozen oysters, you'll never find a pearl in a glass of buttermilk.

"Humph!" ejaculated the other, "I've found as many pearls in buttermilk as I ever have in oysters."

ADVICE TO THE HUSBAND.
A crowd quickly assembled when it was discovered that a tall man in a temperance suit of all black, and wearing tea-total whiskers, was chastising a gay semi-drunk—one of a party of roysterers—with a flapping umbrella.

The young man was taking his castigation to the greatest good humour, while the ineffective weapon fell harmlessly upon his shoulders. The tall man in the Rechabite coat explained with righteous ferocity: "This scoundrel kissed my wife! He just walked up to her here in the street, and kissed her."

"Yes, he did," shrieked a gaunt lady, with a face a little like a defective iron moulding, "and I never saw him before in my life."

Her shrill grief inspired the husband to more violent efforts with the gamp.

"Teach you to kiss my wife!" said he.

Then the portly cabman cut in: "Garn!" he snorted. "You can't hurt him with that. Make him kiss her again!"
