For close on ninety years, the little Church under the hill has done duty as a place of worship for the Anglican community at Torbay. Now, sadly out of repair and not worth refitting, it is to be replaced by a larger and more modern building, just as in keeping with the modern and attractive homes and business places of such an enterprising settlement as Torbay. Since the laying of the corner stone, some months ago, great progress has been made with the coustruction. The outside of the building has been completed and good work has been done on the interior. Externally, the building presents a very ment to the locality. Internally, the building is lofty and well-proportioned and is being finished in cedar.

The Torbay

The Anglican community at Torbay have worked hard and sacrificed much on behalf of their new church, and have paid for every cent's worth of work done and material purchased right up to the present stage of coustruction operations. Their very audable determination is to finish and ay for the building at the same time.
