Speeches by the Minister of Education and Other Prominent Liberals—Telling Disclosure of the Vacillating Conduct of the Opposition and Its Leader.

MOUNT BRYDGES, May 2.—The meeting of the West Middlesex Reform Association was held at the Town Hall in this village to-day and was one of the most largely attended conventions ever held in the riding. Ross, will poll a larger vote than ever at the coming elec He was present himself during the day and was kept busy receiving the well-wishes and hearty hand-shakes of his supporters. Mr. Watterworth, Ex-M.P.P. was the first speaker. He had a hearty reception. In feeling terms he reterred to the loss lich the Liberals of the West Riding had stained through the death of various well-nows and respected citizens, including lassrs, C. J. The electors of the fonstituency have every inducement to support Mr. Ross, continued the speaker. We have other reasons besides the fact that he is an old and faithful servant of the constituency. Any candidate would suit us provided he supported Hon. Oliver Mowat. To the hast eighteen years that grand old sun—the Gladstone of Canada (cheers)—this managed the affairs of Ontario in such manner that not a single corrupt transacion can be brought home to him or his floverment. He advised them to complete their organization at once, and go to work to make ready that every vote in favor of honest government should be polled in favor of Hon. G. W. Ross, who should be placed at the head of the poll by a larger majority Hon. G. W. Ross, who should be placed at the head of the poll by a larger majority than ever has yet been recorded for him. Then he would be able to complete the educational reforms which he had so successfully inaugurated, while aiding Oliver Mowat in faithfully conducting the general affairs of the Province. For reasons thus set forth, Mr. Watterworth said, it had given him the greatest pleasure to propose given him the greatest pleasure to propo Hon. G. W. Ross as the Liberal candida for the riding. (Loud cheers.)

MR. WM. MURDOCH made a capital speech in support of the nomination. He spoke on the license law, made a capital speech in support of the nomination. He spoke on the license law, and said that he was sure every man who had anything to do with councils, and was not prejudiced, would say that Mr. Meredith's policy to hand back the licensing system, in any degree, to the municipalities, would be a retrograde step. On the registrar question, he believed that a government, whether Liberal or Conservative, would be fully as capable of making an appointment as county councils would be. He had no faith in the professions of some Tories, that Mr. Meredith would reduce the salary if he got into power. Tory Governments were not made that way. He believed that Governments should select their own officials. The trouble with the Tory bosses, however, was that they wished to get hold of the Provincial resources, which Mr. Mowat had so carefully defended and husbanded, and distribute them among their favorites as they had done with the Dominion property under their control. He believed it was the duty of every patriot to minion property under their control. He believed it was the duty of every patriot to believed it was the duty of every parties to resist these men, so closely allied with the Rykert gang, and in West Middlesex that could be done by voting for the colleague of their honored Premier, Hon. G. W. Ross. (Cheers).

(Cheers)

MR. GEO C. GIBBONS,
as president of the City of London Liberal Association, was proud to be present that day and aid in doing honor to the able colleague of Hon. Oliver Mowat. The Liberals of West Middlesex had every reason to entertain the highest regard for the member for the riding. Mr. Ross was especially honored by the fact that the whole force of the enemy had leveled its batteries against him. The Tories of today have not a single tenable cry to bring against the Ministry. At last election, they said we were corrupt, and Mr. Meredith said he wanted the people to aid him in putting that down. Now they have to confess that the Government's financial record is a clean one. Then they said the confess that the Government's financial record is a clean one. Then they said the Government had no surplus. We are getting interest from the investments straight along now, and that cry won't go down. At last election the chief Tory organ urged its leader to raise the religious cry. Now he and his friends are trying to do it, but not in every constituency. They know that it is all arrant humbug, and they are trying to hedge in some of the ridings. Mr. Macklin has retired in North Middlesex. Why did he retire? Well, at the convention he committed himself to the supposed views of his leaders in regard to separate schools. He has since said that he would fight it on that line. But the Tery managers have gone to him, and said,

Debate on the Increased Duty

A Surprise All Round-Rykert Steps Down and Out.

OTTAWA, Friday, May 2. In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Wood, of Westmoreland, called attention to the Globe's paragraph regarding the Albert and Cape Tormentine Railway, and his connection with it, also the public expenditures to improve his investment in mills on the line. He said: "I own no penditures to maprove his and the mills on the line. He said: "I own no mills on the line. He said: "I own no mills on the line. I have no private or personal interest to be served in any way by the construction of that line.

There was a long debate on the new iron bounty proposals. Mr. Foster presented the resolutions, explaining that in 1883 a bounty of $1 50 was granted for three years and $1 for three years thereafter. In 1886, on the expiry of the first term, the bounty of $1 50 was renewed and the $1 bounty of $1 years and $1 for three years thereater. The 1886, on the expiry of the first term, the bounty of $1 50 was renewed and the $1 was made to apply to the succeeding three years. It was now proposed to continue the principle and make the bounty $2 from the expiry of the bounty in 1892.

Sir Richard Cartwright contended that as the iron duties fell upon an article which was the raw material of many manufacturers and of universal every-day use, they were about the most injurious to the public interest of the whole list. Considering that pig iron was produced at an average of $11 a ton, the advantage given to the manufacturers by the duty of $4 was an enormous one, yet an increase of the bounty to $2 was now proposed. The true policy to promote the iron manufacture in Canada was to enlarge the market and open to Canadian producers at least the markets of the continent.

Mr. Davis made a strong, well-reasoned speech on the question, presenting the figures in a striking light. He read from Sir Leonard Tilley's speeches in the early days of the National Policy, declaring that a temporary protection was all that was necessary, to be taken off in about ten years, when the industry was well established. Now, after the expiry of ten years, the proposal was to continue the bounty for seven years and to increase it. There never was a case where people of this country were so deluded and duped as in this increase of iron duties. The policy was hateful, burdensome and wrong. were so deluded and duped as in this in-crease of iron duties. The policy was hate-ful, burdensome and wrong.

Mr. Chariton and Mr. Watson also spoke in opposition to the resolution. The ques-tion was discussed again after recess, and the resolution was finally adopted in committee.

MR. RYKERT STEPS DOWN.

When the House resumed after recess, the unexpected happened. Mr. Rykert handed in his resignation as member for Lincoln and Niagara and left the House. He felt that the matter having at that time been so thorcughly discussed he had a right to claim protection under the law against it being brought up again after this lapse of time. This correspondence was of a private and confidential nature, he said, and had no right to be brought before Parliament. He complained that the committee appointed called upon him to proceed with his defense without any proceed with his defense

Mr. Blake rose to a point of order. It was not in order, he said to discuss the conduct of a committee which had not reorted.

Mr. Speaker—I understand that unable member is not doing that.

Mr. Blake—He certainly was proceeding to discuss the conduct of the committee.

Mr. Rykert, continuing, said: "I do not wish to transgress the rules, but I feel that I have not had fair play at the hands of the House or the committee. I had hoped that was first closed before the to discuss the conduct of the committee.
