AIRSHIP'S FLIGHT.

London, Sept. 19.—Stanley Spencer, a well known English aviator, today successfully accomplished a remarkable flight over London in an airship of his own invention. It is estimated that his ship travelled nearly thirty miles.

Spencer's airship was a blimp, and was controlled by means of a petrol engine of about 20 horse power. It was built by the inventor himself, and was of a simple design.

The flight was made on the 19th of September, and was witnessed by a large number of people. The airship was seen to rise and fall at will, and to travel in any direction.

Spencer's airship is a great improvement on the balloons of the past. It is more reliable, and more comfortable, and it is more easily controlled.

The inventor of the airship is a man of great energy and determination. He has spent many years of his life in the study of aviation, and he has made many valuable discoveries.

Spencer's airship is a great step forward in the history of aviation. It is a machine that is well adapted for the purposes of transport, and it is a machine that is well adapted for the purposes of recreation.

TO PREVENT CONSUMPTION IN CANADA.

There is nothing truer to-day than that consumption can be cured except, perhaps that it may be acquired for it is seldom if ever hereditary. Overcrowding, defective ventilation, and general insanitation are its prime promoters, while the wearing of woollen clothing is aggravated by careless cooking, the use of unwholesome and unwholesome foods, and of alcoholic beverages in excess.

In Canada consumption and other forms of tuberculosis annually cause between 7,000 and 8,000 deaths. Voluntary action has been taken by the organization of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Consumption, and other forms of tuberculosis, to cope with this great calamity by means of that knowledge of treatment and prevention, which was the result of scientific research and discovery.

The official report of the second annual convention of this association has been distributed, and the labors of the organization have evidently been directed in a practical fashion to paying the way for greater efforts in the future, by the circulation of literature dealing with tuberculosis, its causes its prevention, and its cure in such a form as to be easily understood by the ordinary reader.

Consumption is no new or modern disease. It is a disease of the past, and it is a disease that is well known to all. It is a disease that is well known to all, and it is a disease that is well known to all.

The Canadian Association for the Prevention of Consumption, and other forms of tuberculosis, is a body of men and women who are devoted to the cause of humanity. They are men and women who are devoted to the cause of humanity, and they are men and women who are devoted to the cause of humanity.

STOCK SPECULATION.

The past few days must have shown any man who was about with his eyes open that the city monopoly was not a thing to be taken for granted. The young man in the morning suit, the youth and venturesome age are intermingled in the speculative market, and the margins are being narrowed by which would gasp at the thought of speculation in the institution of money that the collapse of the market provoked. Speculating in the stock market is a thing that is well known to all, and it is a thing that is well known to all.

The stock market is a thing that is well known to all, and it is a thing that is well known to all. It is a thing that is well known to all, and it is a thing that is well known to all. It is a thing that is well known to all, and it is a thing that is well known to all.

Select Literature.

JOHNNY'S STAMP ACT. (Boston Youth's Campaign.) The old stamp book had been "kicking around the house" for years, from one resting place to another, until at last it found ownership and a safe resting place among Johnny's treasures.

The strange bits of colored paper had a fascination for Johnny. They were posted in straight lines up and down the pages. The name of the country, the stamps of which had the face of a king, a queen, or a saint, and boyish writing, not by Johnny himself, but by his uncle, Jim, came to him.

"Ma," said Mabel, as she heard the two boys talking, "I don't think you are doing right. You are taking the stamps out of the book, and you are giving them to your friends. You are giving them to your friends, and you are giving them to your friends." "Ma," said Mabel, as she heard the two boys talking, "I don't think you are doing right. You are taking the stamps out of the book, and you are giving them to your friends. You are giving them to your friends, and you are giving them to your friends."

"Well, I declare," was his sleepy exclamation, "what a horrid dream!" The next one was a paper of "ordinary" and preparing to mount, down from the crown of his forehead. "Well, really, Johnny, that is a question that could be asked of any boy. Johnny knew him at once by his pointed goatee, but he looked upon him as a stranger, and he looked upon him as a stranger, and he looked upon him as a stranger."

Johnny found himself out at sea, and he was looking for a way to get back to land. He was looking for a way to get back to land, and he was looking for a way to get back to land. He was looking for a way to get back to land, and he was looking for a way to get back to land.

THE LAST SLEEP.

Mary Mapes Dodge. We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still. The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek so pale and chill. The lips that will never lift again, the strange, white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this dream that comes to us, this dream that takes us away from the world, and leaves us in a world of our own. We know not what it means, dear, this dream that takes us away from the world, and leaves us in a world of our own.

But this we know. Our loved and lost, if he should come and ask us, "What is life?" we should not say, "Life is a mystery as deep as ever death is." We should not say, "Life is a mystery as deep as ever death is." We should not say, "Life is a mystery as deep as ever death is."

Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought, "So, though we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more." Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought, "So, though we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more."

The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent. She comes as a little child, and she comes as a little child, and she comes as a little child. She comes as a little child, and she comes as a little child, and she comes as a little child.

And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead. And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead. And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead. And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought, "So, though we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more." Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought, "So, though we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more, we may meet you no more."

THE TIMES' ESTIMATE OF ROOSEVELT.

London, Oct. 17.—The "Times" in a editorial article says on the occasion of the death of President Roosevelt, "It would be interesting to know what consideration President Roosevelt would have given to the coal strike, and the definite entry in his diary, which would be a record of his wishes of the west in regard to railways. He wanted another line across the continent from Montreal right away, and he believed the young men of the Canada would live to see the completion of the line."

Another railway across the continent. The number was 121,277, and disbursements to $269,322, leaving a balance to be carried to the current year's account of $367,181. Any person who pays one dollar or more a year becomes an annual member, while the contribution of one dollar entitles the donor to full membership. It is high-ly desirable that a large membership should be secured if the objects aimed at by the Association are to be maintained in any appreciable degree, and we strongly urge all our readers to do so. The Association are to be held at least one dollar to either Dr. Small, or Mr. Courtney, at Ottawa; to Mr. W. G. Edwards, at Rockland, Ont., remembering that every member of a society for the prevention of disease is a worker and a missionary in a field as important as ever lay before anyone who has taken up the cause of humanity.

Don't look at the world through green glasses. People who understand it best are the least to condemn it. It is the same measure that we reform ourselves the world is reformed accordingly, for what it should be depends on each and every one of us. Make it better.
