Doctor's Indorse Newbro's Herpicide for the Hair

When a doctor endorses a preparation it means more than an ordinary testimonial. His opinion is always that of the professional man devoted to the welfare of the people. Dr. J. J. Boyd, Covington, Tenn., says: "I feel it my duty to write this for the benefit of those suffering from dandruff. In the average case a few applications of Newbro's Herpicide will remove all dandruff. It is advisable to continue its use for several weeks." The words of J. B. Thompson, M. D., No. 2 Burroughs Place, Cor. Hollis St., Boston, Mass., are not less enthusiastic: "I can only speak in praise of Newbro's Herpicide. It is all that is claimed and perhaps more. Herpicide not only cleanses the scalp but brightens the hair, gives it life and makes it soft." Dr. T. A. Moore, Duncan, Ariz., writes of his experience: "My scalp was in places covered by patches of dry, scaly material and the itching was incessant. Since using Herpicide all these evils have disappeared and my hair is soft, smooth and growing long, after it was over the real Christians of all lands would again get together and plan for a time when Christian brotherhood should supplant war. Then came the time of prayer. At the meeting in the Upper Room has been repeated in history. It was in that hour. Outside Germany, French and English were going out to fight one another; here Germans, French and English were kneeling in prayer. Outside the people were calling for blood; here representatives of twelve peoples were praying for increased love for one another. Outside the Germans, French and English were hurling epithets of hatred and revenge at each other; here they were pleading themselves in new lips of brotherhood in Christ's kingdom of good-will. Representatives of five nations were called upon for prayer. First I was asked to pray as representative of America. I have prayed for public shaming perhaps five thousand times in my life, but never before this morning did I realize what it was to voice the cry of the people before me, and of the world. I had no conception of what I should say when I arose--I have no idea now what I said. I only know that my heart was bleeding for the sins of the world, and I saw a vision of millions of little children who were soon to team the devastated cities hungry, cold, fatherless--all because of the sin of a few men. I saw the mad orgy of lust, vice, drunkenness, hatred, cruelty that was to be loosed, and I felt for once something of what Christ felt in Gethsemane. I could only beseech God over and over again to spare us this thing, and to teach men that Christ's test of discipleship was that they should love one another. After I had finished praying Dr. Siegmund-Schultze, now representing Germany, prayed, and Dr. John C. Ford from England, then Dr. Marquis Dumesnil from France, and Dr. K. Bohringer from Switzerland. It is hard to have great prayers coupled with the millions among the nations. It is too sad to see the governments who were waging war against each other could not have heard German prayers for God's blessings on France and England, English and French praying for God's blessings upon Germany. Still kneeling we remained a time in silence. Then those who had sufficient control of themselves to utter words continued to lift our hearts unto the Lord. As I sat there it came over me when the peace of the world should come. It would be when the peoples of the various nations felt toward one another as we in that room felt toward one another. I looked up once and there before me I saw a German, a Frenchman and an Englishman, kneeling so close together that their arms touched. Nothing in Heaven or earth could have made those kneeling disciples of the Lord fight one another. Were the leaders of the nations--even three nations of Europe--Christians as those three men were Christians, no power in heaven or earth could plunge their nations into war. I believe there are many people in every nation who have reached this stage of real Christianity. I believe this feeling is spreading among the people. I find it among working men in Europe. It found expression in the streets of Paris. It would have found considerable expression among the workingmen of Germany had not the Kaiser prohibited all assemblies of the people. I have incessantly found it among the pastors of the churches, especially in America and England. It is growing everywhere. The pity of it is that it has not reached the dignitaries of either state or church in two or three nations. Had every Protestant pastor in Germany reached the point of real Christianity that those Germans kneeling beside the English at Constance had reached and had the Roman Catholic priests in Austria reached the point that those priests of the various nations had reached who were to have knelt side by side in prayer the leaders after our Constance meeting--in that city of Liege which now lies in dust and ashes--in a conference similar to ours, this war would not have been. This is all there is to the peace movement--to bring the leaders of the church, the nation, the trades unions, the social democrats to the point of Christian brotherhood those kneeling disciples had reached in that quiet chamber of the Lord at Constance. It is all so simple, so easy, so near, but so seemingly impossible, so hard, so far off, because of our stubbornness, our blindness, most of all, our sin. The meeting closed with a word from Dr. George U. Wagner, the eminent Lutheran pastor of New York, who had been to the morning service of that church in the city. The people in the great congregation were in tears, he told us. Yes, all over Germany and France and England the people--the Christian people--were in tears, but they had no word to say or knew not how to say it, while the governments were plunging them into calamity and ruin, over nothing but the desire of a few men in Austria to get revenge in their own perverse way. How long must this last? How long must the people of Germany and Austria remain dumb under the rods of the heartless and the oppressors? Again, is not here a great hope for peace, that before

Sept. 21. There will be no service in the Church on Thursday evening. The Misses Alice Kent, Edith Bent and Mary Armstrong left last Tuesday for Boston. Mrs. A. Hodkins, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. S. D. James has returned to Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hennigar from Boston, have been the guests of Mrs. Ralph Bent for several days. Mrs. J. H. MacLean and her daughter, Mrs. Fred MacLean and two children, from Lynn, has been visiting relatives here. Castorhall, N.B. MINARD'S LINIMENT CO., Limited. Dear Sirs:--While in the country last Summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disfigured for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes. Yours truly, W. A. V. R.

Through Europe on the Eye of War

terwards learned England was that day straining every nerve to keep Germany from plunging recklessly into the strife. There was nothing to do but pray.
Mr. Baker was in the chair, and with tears in his eyes told of the remarkable work that had been accomplished by the British and German churches to establish good-will between the two nations. A group of men of good-will existed in each nation whose friendship no war could break. It looked as though they were all going to be wasted in a moment. But we must not believe that. Such work could never be in vain. If war came, after it was over there would be this foundation on which to build anew. Even then it was not too late. It seemed incredible to him that all Europe should go to war even considering the steps toward war that had already been taken. Let us all pray to God with all our hearts that he avert this dire catastrophe.
Before the prayers Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City, Mo., and Bishop John L. Nuelson, of Zurich, Switzerland, were asked to say a few words that our hearts might be attuned to our high purpose and our faith sustained as the kingdom of God seemed ready to fall all about us. Their remarks were of that prophetic nature that lifted them into prayer and like prayer, would lose their high character in print. Bishop Hendrix's words were a call to cling to God with renewed fervor, to keep our faith that even above a sinful, confused world his hand ruled; that out of men's blindness and passion he would bring some ultimate good. He believed that if this awful war came, out of it the world might learn that their trust in brute power and force was vain. Here was the result of it. At last they might see that there was no lasting security, justice, peace or happiness as they put their trust in God. The peacemakers would go home with this message for all the world. Perhaps the world would now be prepared to listen.
Bishop Nuelson, of Zurich, reminded the delegates that they were not praying alone that morning. That in thousands of churches and from millions of hearts of men and women prayers were now ascending to the throne of God that this conduct of the nations might be avoided. Let us remember that these wars were not begun by the people--but by ruthless monarchs and the cliques about them. He had just come from two great international gatherings where members of all nations had been sitting about the Lord's table together. These were not the men who made war. They with us were lamenting these dark days. Even though this war came, and lasted long, after it was over the real Christians of all lands would again get together and plan for a time when Christian brotherhood should supplant war.

Then came the time of prayer. At the meeting in the Upper Room has been repeated in history. It was in that hour. long the people of Germany and Austria and Russia will insist on democracy, on having a voice as well as feelings? It is worthy of careful notice that the two democracies of Europe, England and France, did all within their power to fend off the war, using every resource until the last moment. Let us have democracies for another reason. It is easy to educate democracies. Pastors and teachers are freer to speak their views and the people can discuss great problems free from censorship. Again perhaps democracy and peace must come together.
It seemed like sacrilege to transact any business at the close of that sacramental meeting. But it was the Lord's business and had to be done. First of all the following petition was unanimously adopted and ordered telegraphed to every ruler of the United States; and to the President of the United States:
"The Conference of members of Christian churches representing twelve countries and thirty confessions assembled at Constance to promote friendly relations between nations, solemnly appeals to Christian rulers to avert a war between millions of men among whom friendship and common interests have been steadily growing, and thereby to save from disaster Christian civilization and assert the power of the Christian spirit in human affairs."
Then the question of continuing the Conference had to be settled. There was considerable nervousness among the delegates. Some had imperative duties at home and some had little children who needed them so that the probability of being shut up in Constance for several weeks or months, even though they might be safe, somewhat alarmed them. But when I put to our American delegates the point that here was a great opportunity of history to show the world that instead of silencing us, the nations going to war would only make us holdier, and that if they were going to fight we were going to talk peace all the more earnestly; that this would be a spectacle which neither our own nation nor Europe would ever forget, almost with one voice they voted to go on with the conference. The English and other delegates took the same brave attitude, and the first session of the Conference to take up the regular business was set for that afternoon at four o'clock. The significant events of this second remarkable gathering will be rehearsed in the next chapter.
