

Mr. Macallum said it was the inability to procure suitable food. They stood the first season very well, but could not procure food the second. There were no parasites in them, they were in a perfectly normal condition.

Mr. Brodie asked the difference between pathological and normal growths.

Mr. Macallum could not, he said, tell which was pathological and which was normal, until all the conditions were understood.

