

should. We do not have as many present at the meetings as we should, and you will readily understand that it is impossible to run an institution of this kind unless the gentlemen who have been elected on these committees attend to their duties. There are several of them who have never been to a meeting, which I do not think is fair.

I feel safe in saying that had it not been for the Executive Committee in the past, neither Mr. Jefferis or Mr. McRae would have met with the success they did during their year of office, and I sincerely hope the Executive and Reception Committees, when called upon to attend meetings will endeavor to do so in future,

The next order of business is the announcement of new members.
