

Archdeacon Scot

- 2 -

men to take up the Labrador work, there would be no use at this time of the year in making further efforts.

I promise you to bring the matter before the student body next Fall, and I agree with you that it is a work with which McGill might very well associate itself. Our interest, though, could not involve any financial obligations and would have to be confined to inducing students to take up this teaching or social work for the summer. We could, of course, supply them with lanterns and slides to make lectures more interesting, but the University has no money to devote to social work of the kind mentioned.

With all kind wishes, I am,

Yours faithfully,