

his life, 144; American news of the Government to vessels, 145; Rodgers 146; his humanity, 147; 147; death, 143.

perhaps the most abundant; the universality of the not only politically, but in the entire economy of man to effect its repeal, 173; to Commander McKenpected to secure a peace and not the olive branch, of Mexico put an end to the treaty signed, payments, 710; a singular; the treaty a fortunate one who served the Gov the adoption of the two-convention, 591.

at Caroline, 573.

the Interior, 573; of an

ions, 15.

movement, 133; and against 138, 134; memorial from on of Texas, and for the lot of Columbia, 134; pe- 134; state of the case, 134; subject of the petitions 134; inevitable separation of Calhoun, 134; question creating these memorials, the question of reception favors to obtain, from the lid cover all the questions of slavery, 135; his the dogma of "no power existence of slavery in invented, 135; reference line, 130; Calhoun's re- 136; remarks, 136; Clay's 137; repugnance of 133; remarks of senators 133; to aggravate the ex- Calhoun, 139; action of 139; the important part of Calhoun's views of the Mis-ordinance of 1787, in the tions laid down by him, power exercised by Con- Missouri Compromise, 141; old writings pro- that Monroe's Cabinet 42; circumstances favor- Calhoun in 1820, in 1837-38, in his opinions on the co- 143; remarks, 143; records and portentous debate, petitions and memorials

150; manner in which it is advocated, 150; course of Mr. Slade, 150; suggestion of Legare, 150; excited action of the House, 150; further excitement, Wise requests his colleagues to retire with him, 151; the invitation renewed by Rhett, 151; McKay interposes the objection that heads Slade, 151; question on leave taken, 152; adjournment moved and carried, 152.

Invitation to Southern members to meet together, 152; the meeting, 152; result, 153; amendment of the rules, 153; vote, 153; remarks, 154; prominent members for the petitions, 154.

Abolitionists classified by Mr. Clay.—Speech of Mr. Clay, 154; "the most judicious course to be pursued with abolition petitions, 154; difference in the form of proceeding, 153; three classes of persons opposed to the continued existence of slavery, 153; the attempt to array one section of the Union against another, 155; the means employed for the end, 156; the spirit of abolitionism has displayed itself at three epochs of our history, 156; further remarks, 156."

Calhoun's resolutions, 696; the real point of complaint, 696; speech of Mr. Calhoun, 696; extract, 696; never voted upon, 697; "firebrand," 697; commencement of the slavery agitation founded upon the dogma of "no power in Congress to legislate upon slavery in the territories," 697; position of Mr. Calhoun up to this time, 697; further remarks, 697; the resolutions characterized as nullification, 697.

Disunion letter of Mr. Calhoun to a member of the Alabama Legislature, 693; disavows the design of a dissolution of the Union, and at the same time proves it, 693; opening paragraph, 693; "to force the issue," 696; notices the act of the Pennsylvania Legislature, 696; his secret views of the Wilmot proviso, 699; measures of retaliation suggested, 699; further extracts, 700; a further feature in the plan of forcing the issue, 700; a Southern Convention, 700; the letter furnishes the key to unlock Calhoun's whole system of slavery agitation, 700.

Special message of President Polk, 712; a delusive calculation, 713; a new dogma invented, 713; the slavery part of the Constitution extends itself to territories, 713; broached by Mr. Calhoun, 713; remarks, 714; remarks of Mr. Calhoun on the Missouri case, 714; his error exposed, 714; passed by the South, 714; remarks of Mr. Calhoun on the dissolution of the Union, 715; remarks of Mr. Benton, 715.

Extension of the Constitution.—The territories without a government, 729; motion of Mr. Walker of Wisconsin as an amendment to the appropriation bill, 729; a disorderly motion, 729; an amendment inserting an extension of the Constitution, 729; remarks of Mr. Webster, 729; reply of Mr. Calhoun, 730; the Constitution made for States, not Territories, 731; examination of Calhoun's position, 731; debate takes a slavery turn, 732; bill passed after midnight on the last day of the session, 732; declining to vote, 732; remarks, 732; "forcing the issue," 733.

Nightly meetings of members from the slave States, 733; Calhoun at the bottom of the movement, 733; his manifesto superseded by a new address in the grand committee, 733; replaced, 733; changed from the original draft, 734; saluted as the second Declaration of Independence, 734; remarks, 734; extracts, 734; emancipation held to be certain, if not prevented, 735; the means of prevention, 735; takes the attitude of self-defence, 735; further contents of the manifesto, 736; last speech of Mr. Calhoun, 744; read by Mr. Mason, 744; first cause of the slavery disease, the ordinance of 1787, 744; the second, the Missouri Compromise, 744 third, slavery agitation, 744; history of the agitation, 744; process of disruption going on, 745; successive blows required to snap the cords asunder, 745; extract, 745; the last cord, 746; extracts, 746; the remedy, 746.

Slaves, American, liberation of in British Colonies.—Three instances of this kind had occurred, 182; details of each, 189; redress obtained from Great Britain in the first two cases, 182; resolution offered on the subject by Mr. Calhoun, 183; can a municipal regulation of Great Britain alter the law of nations? 183; Calhoun's argument, 189; referred, 183.

Slaves, Fugitives.—History of the slave recovery clause, 778; act of 1793, 778; third section, 778; a fair interpretation of the Constitution, 778; the penal section, 778; the law of Pennsylvania, 774, 777; the act of New York, 778; Marcy's reply to an anti-slavery meeting, 775; Seward's reply to the interrogatories of the same meeting, 776; sentence on a citizen of Maryland for recapturing his slave in Pennsylvania, 778; decision of the Supreme Court, 778; a bill reported on the subject of fugitive slaves, 778; proviso in favor of a jury trial rejected, 779; sentiments of Mr. Cass, 779; further remarks, 780.

SMITH, GEN. SAMUEL, decease of, 176; forty years in Congress, 176; industry, 176; punctuality, 176; characteristics, 176; long life and service, 176.

SMITH, WILLIAM, declines the appointment of Judge of the Supreme Court, 9.

Somers, Brig. alleged Mutiny on Board.—Manner of entering the harbor of New York, 523; astonishment of the public at the news, 523; the vessel and her crew, 523; how first communicated, 523; ridicule the only answer first given, 524; further relative to the first discovery, 524, 525; means for arrest of the suspected, 525; the arrest, 516; treatment, 526; evidences sought for, 527; further arrests, 529; the turning point of the case, 529; suspicious circumstances, 530; interrogatories, 530; facts, 531; treatment of the prisoners, 533; the hand-spike sign, 539; missing their muster, 538; the African knife, 538; the battle-axe alarm, 534; letter of the commander to the officers, 534; council of officers, 535 testimony before the council, 535; incidental circumstances, 536; new arrests, 537; the way in which three men were doomed to death, 537; trial of Governor Wall at Old Bailey, 537; further proceedings, 538, 539; informing the prisoners of their fate, 540; their conduct, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545; the executions, 546; report of the confessions false upon its face, 547; the case of Small and Cromwell, 543; death and innocence of the men, 549; conclusion of the execution, 549; speech of the commander, 550; speech on the Sunday following, 551; the letter in the Bible, 551; four men in iron, 551; interval after the execution, 552; evidence of Gausevoort, 552; conclusion of the report, 553; the purser's steward, 554; Sergeant Garty, 555; the commander's clerk, 556; recommendations for reward and promotion, 556; proceedings of the court-martial, 557; precipitation, 557; the reason, 557; the composition of the court, 558; end of the prosecutions, 559.

The real design of Spencer, 559; the case of Lieut Col. Wall of the British service, 560; subsequent career of Commander Mackenzie, 561; remark of Santa Anna, 561; the work of fourteen years, 561.

South Sea scheme, its origin, and pretensions, 875.

Spells circular, its issue, 14.

SPENCER, JOHN C., Secretary of War, 856; Secretary of the Treasury, 569.

STRANGE, ROBERT, on the slavery resolutions, 139.