

Another Notable Short Story

Each one of the series of short stories by great living English writers, now running in The Canadian Magazine, is a real entertainment in itself. Read

"The Waitress at Santy"

in this number, and be sure that the next,

"Captivity"

By E. Temple Thurston, is just as good.

"Captivity" is different from any short story you have ever read. The author is a great writer—he leaves something to think about.

ALSO

"The Gods of the New Era"

By Sergeant (Rev.) Lorne Pierce, M.A.

which discusses H. G. Wells's ideas of religion.

Where is Canadian Literature?

By J. Murray Gibbon, Author of "Hearts and Faces", etc.

An unusual consideration of the present standing and outlook of letters in Canada.

Other articles and short stories of merit.
