

those acquaintances and friends who have been ungrudging with their help on the matters upon which he has appealed to them. Particularly great is his debt to Sir Almeric FitzRoy, K.C.B., Clerk of the Privy Council, Mr. F. A. Hyett, B.A., J.P., Chairman of Quarter Sessions for Gloucestershire, Sir Courtenay Ilbert, G.C.B., Clerk of the House of Commons, Mr. O. E. Niemeyer, of The Treasury, and Sir Ernest Trevelyan, Reader in Indian Law at Oxford, formerly Judge of the High Court at Calcutta, who have placed their great experience of special subjects freely at his disposal. If the writer has failed to profit as he should have done by their help, the fault is his, not theirs; and he is alone to blame for errors, while such merit as may be found in the book is due mainly to them.
