Have to Say About It. Does Not Suit Mr. Middleton

Mr. J. T. Middleton, M.L.A., the father of the anti-department store bill in the Legislature, surprised the delegation somewhat by announcing that the schedule did not suit him. His bill was similar to the one of last year, and involved a progressive license on all over three lines of goods carried.

The Legislation Committee ridded itself of the graduated business tax scheme proposed by the Retail Merchants' Association by sending it on to Council yesterday afternoon, with no

Mr. Rogers replied that it would increase profits.

To the chairman's inquiry as to what the effect of the law would be on departmental store business, Mr. Rogers explained that the big stores do their business by advertising. The moment the people began to see that they could get as good bargains elsewhere they would go elsewhere for them. Business from all over the country would still come to Toronto, but through the wholesale houses and not through the wholesale houses and not through the present channels. The tax was not intended to affect wholesale stores.

Favors the New Tax.

Ald. Leslie them took up the gauntlet and delivered a long argument in favor of the new tax. Regarding Ald, Scott's objection to it, that it was class legislation, be pointed out that the whole Assessment Act was a mass of incongruity and class legislation. Eaton's taxes did not now do more probably than to pay for the two policemen required for his protection. Who was to pay for his fire protection. Who was to unicipal privileges? He would wipe out the tax on personality, and tax fronting, but his protection is and his other municipal privileges? He would wipe out the tax on personality, and tax fronting, but his protection is and his other municipal privileges? He would wipe out the tax on personality, and tax fronting, but his protection is and business.

Ald. Leslie: I say we must get the revenue. If they do all the business they must pay all the taxes.
He moved that Council be recommended to ask for legislation along the lines of the Retail Merchants' Association ashedule.

Ald. Rutter proclaimed himself in opposition to departmental stores. "But," said he, "Ald. Leslie says if departmental stores will pay the taxes he would allow them to go on. Well, I don't say that. That's where we differ.'

feared that if Mr. Eaton were taxed as proposed he might simply start up out in Oakville and call the people to him. He would go into specialist lines. But the great objection was that it would be taxing energy. If a man, by neans of the newspapers, built up his business he was to be taxed for it. Centralization of business was going on all over the world. The question was, How could Toronto stem the tide?
