Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman is the caponalible leader of the opposition, and he has recently asserted that British methods in clearing the districts of the two conquered, but unpactied, colonies have been as barbarous as those of the Spaniah tactics of the Children of the Epiper and the Children and the Epiper and the Children and Epiper and the Children and the Epiper

The correspondent suggests a means of getting rid of the difficulty of over-burdened wires by appointing half a dozen or more experienced men as staff officers, with the special function of describing the with the special function of describing the camp incidents and battle scenes for the entire English press. The press, as a whole, would then have a news service of a high order of excellence, free from the taint of irresponsible sensationalism and untrammelled by the restraints and vexatious annoyances of censorship.
