HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS' CLUB WILL BECOME

Meeting Called Yesterday To

That the High School Girls' Club, disbanded since the Collegiate fire, is to be reorganized was decided at a meeting of the girls held yesterday afternoon. The meeting was called by Principal W. H. T. Mooney, who was very anxious that the club should be continued in spite of the difficulties, and was presided over by Miss McCamus. The chief business of yesterday's meeting was the laying of plans for the election of club officers in the near future.

STRATFORD CANADIAN CLUB. "The Girl of Today" was the subject of a highly entertaining address given in Stratford on Saturday afternoon by Miss Knox, principal of Havergal Col-lege, Toronto. The address was under the auspices of the Women's Canadian Club.

Miss Knox strongly advocated religious instruction in the schools, declaring that no young woman could succeed, no matter how highly educated, if she did not feel and believe in the presence of God. "If the children were taught a proverb a day, instead of 'Jack and Jill,' in later years they would find their education of real value to them," said the speaker.

She appealed to mothers, asking them to know with whom their daughters associated.

Following the address, luncheon was served.

Mrs. F. H. Thompson, president of the Women's Canadian Club, was in the chair.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Miss Jennie Powell, St. Ives, on Wednesday, October 20, Rev. R. Osborne of Thorndale officiating, when her niece. Kathleen E. Smihert. was united in marriage to Wilfred W. Evans of Kitchener. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with maple leaves, chrysanthemums and other autumn flowers. But here I could get no further. For how on earth could I explain the situation? I had assured him that I was in debt to the extent of a thousand dollar. This sum he generously had lent me. How then could I explain that I already had had fifteen hundred dollars in my possession?

I had his address. I would wire to have would be married—everything would be all right.

At one o'clock I arrayed myself in my prettiest clothes, packed a couple of suitcases and a largish trunk, walked to the mearest shop, and telephoned to the station for a taxi.

In fifteen minutes the total arrayed arrayed with the station for a taxi.

venient Bella, is a name of great power and dignity. It comes from the "eagle" series of Icelandic names, which are responsible for many of the appellatives popular in English-speaking countries.

Arabella signifies "eagle heroine."

It was an unexpected blow! I had been robbed! At first the knowledge almost stunned me.

Fifteen hundred dollars! My worldly all!

"Without it Freddie and I can't afford to be married!" I said aloud, staring miserably at my white-faced reflection in the looking-glass.

What would Fred say?

Some third had entered the place with the place in the local police. If you're a romantic little goose, I'm not!"

With that parting shot, she left me to my meditations.

"If we can't catch the thief ourselves, we'll put detectives on the job." they assured me, cheerily.

And hope revived
I did not speak to aunt again that night. I went early to bed. Tomorrow I was to meet Freddie. We would be married—yes—despite our big financial loss. I would go to work—a sort of fifty-fifty proposition in the matrimonial game. I would be a working partner, not a drone.

At breakfast aunt repeated her cutting observations of the night before. They carried very little weight with me.

For a moment she seemed to have forgotten my loss.

I mopped my eyes.

"I—I love him, aunt. I—I'm going to marry him."

"Good gracious! When?"

"Tomorrow afternoon."

"Tomorrow afternoon." "I positively forbid it." A little wave III.

"I—I can't help that." A little wave of anger came to me. I was of age. Aunt must not treat me as a child.

"Listen to me, Anne. If you leave this house tomorrow to marry Fred Delaunay, you leave it for good and all! The man's a cad. He's only after you because he thinks that I'll support you both, for life! I'm willing to support you, but I absolutely refuse to support a lazy, worthless husband into the bargain. Understand that, please."

Never before had my aunt spoken so sharply to me. It was a bitter pill. But I would endure it, for Fred's sake. Love endured all things—real love—the sort I had.

There was even a kind of exaltation in this martyrdom

The Normans, who made radical changes in all names that did not sound like French, cut Arabella down to Arbell. "My Lady Arbell" was the title of the unfortunate Arabella Stuart, whose history is familiar to all of us. It is chiefly due to this poor lady that Arabella gained such vogue and had such widespread usage in Eugland.

Arabella's talismanic gem is the diamond. It promises her fearlessness, success, and, if set in gold and worn on the left hand, true and abiding love. ""Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive," I quoted unoriginally. I had lied to him. I hated to confess that lie.

And then my errant thoughts returned to my fiance. Poor, disappointed Fred! I pictured his eager, expectant face awaiting me tomorrow alternoon. I would arrive, empty-handed.
Oh, why on earth had! not urged him to return to the house-boat after leaving me near the Red Lion Inn? Then possibly he would have caught the thief. At any rate, his presence would have prevented the catastrophe. The return of my aunt broke in on my moody thoughts.

"Hello, Anne, my child! Wherefore so moody and so sad?"
At that my fortitude gave way. I broke down and wept. Incoherently I told her of my trip to town, the cashing of the bonds, and subsequent robbery. But—good heavens, child!—what did you want such a sum of money for? Why didn't you come to me, frankly,
