AFFLUENT SPORTING CLUBS.

One of the incidents of locating sporting clubs in or near a city growing as rapidly as Toronto is the affluence that comes to the club from the rise in land values. Especially so is this true to the east of the city.

The Ontario Jockey Club is rich because of its option on Woodbine Park. The Hunt Club, a little over a mile further to the east, has property now worth $150,000 on a capitalization of $25,000. Still more magnificent is the good fortune that has come to the Toronto Golf Association, that owns one hundred acres in the Greenwood-Danforth annex. This property cost them less than $40,000; it is assessed for $25,000; it would carve up into building lots (20,000 feet of frontage) and clear up $200,000. In ten years it will double in value. All that annexation will do for them is to increase the value of their property much faster than it will increase their taxation. So that if they get a fixed assessment, say for ten years, from the city, they ought to withdraw all opposition to annexation, and before the ten years is up get new and larger grounds, not much further away, but at, say $200 an acre.

MUNICIPAL GOLF LINKS.

During the discussion, reprinted in our issue of yesterday, from the official report, before the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, over the Danforth-avenue district annexation proposal, Mr. E. B. Oslar spoke in opposition on behalf of the Toronto Golf Association. In the course of his remarks he observed that "while golf is a game only, he thought it is recognized that every city must have its golf links—a city without golf links is not right." At this point Mr. Lobbs, who appeared for the petitioning residents, interjected "that is just right, we want to take it into the city and make it part of it." To this Mr. Oslar replied: "Then let the city keep it up."

The World does not know whether Mr. Oslar had any arriere pense behind these words or whether it was intended as a hint that the golf association was prepared to consider the matter of the acquisition by the city of the hundred acres it holds within the area of the contemplated annexation. But there have been less praiseworthy schemes mooted and passed than the establishment of a municipal golf course for the use of the citizens, particularly of those who cannot afford to be members of a private club. There is no healthier or more fascinating open air recreation than this ancient Scottish game, which within recent years has spread with astonishing rapidity over England, the continent of Europe and North America. Nor is there anything novel in the suggestion, for many municipalities in Scotland have laid out public golf links and England is following suit.

Last month the Mayor of Brighton opened the second municipal golf course in England, formed in Hollingbury Park, purchased by the municipality at a cost of over $150,000. By its local act the council has authority to lay out any portion of the estate for cricket, football, golf and other recreative pursuits, and the new nine-hole course was completed at a cost of about $8000, including the expenses of a pavilion. Edinburgh possesses one of the finest inland golf links in the United Kingdom, laid out on the Braid Hills, acquired some years ago as a public park. Golf courses have also been provided in other of its parks as well as sixteen lawn bowling greens, all very popular. The charges made are so small as to make them available to all classes of the community. Lethbridge recently opened a municipal golf course and also maintains quite a number of bowling greens, all of them self-supporting. Many other Scottish burghs maintain golf courses and bowling greens, among them St. Andrew's, whose classic and famous links are a municipal undertaking, the council having acquired them at a cost of $60,000.

The British parliament, by authorizing the provision of recreative facilities, has lent its sanction to the proposition that these are a proper part of the functions of a municipality. Every one admits that it is of advantage to a community to care for the public health—that is the justification for the existence of parks and open spaces and for the large and increasing expenditure made upon them. These are not needed for the masses who have parks and gardens of their own and who live under pleasant conditions—they are intended for the means to order the nature of their environment. No different principle is needed to justify the provision of cheap and wholesome recreation, more especially when it takes the form of golf courses and bowling greens, that can be made self-supporting. For these are not denied to the general public that does not participate in the games. They are pleasant resorts at all times, indeed, all the more so because of the human interest that is found in them. Therefore Mr. Oslar's suggestion that the city should keep up the Danforth golf links is more than a passing report even if that was all that he intended.

A CORRECTION.

Editor World: Permit me a few lines to correct a statement appearing in your paper under date of Oct. 10. Your despatch from Peterboro told at some length how Miss Lizzie Borland had been treated by the Christian Scientists while living, and because of that, the doctors of Peterboro had refused a certificate for burial.

During my sister's illness in Toronto she had been treated by a regular practicing physician and had been in him sent home for rest and quiet, and she remained under his care during the whole of her illness.

She was an active, earnest member of Dovercourt Presbyterian Church, Toronto. At no time did she consent to be treated by Christian Scientists, nor did she at all agree with their teachings. Therefore, in all fairness to her, we desire that her memory be not associated with a sect with which in life she had no sympathy, and to which she did not turn in her last moments. Her body was regularly interred in the family plot in the Little Lake Cemetery, Peterboro.

G. A. Borland, Toronto, Oct. 14, 1908.

AN OBJECTION.

Editor World: I have read your editorial in Tuesday's World re "The extension of Sheppard street." I object decidedly to my property facing on to 33-foot lane, considering I will have to pay the largest share of the expense. If it is made a street 60 feet wide, well and good. The street should be extended to Simcoe. There is a lot of property between Sheppard and Simcoe that has never paid the owners' share. If the extension was made straight thru to its natural outlet, Simcoe street, the city would gain quite an additional revenue then taxing the owners. No narrow street in the business portion of the city. Let the extension be 60 feet or not at all.
