ment bullding, and semmed to be in good spirits.

At first the police of the 100th street station could not determine whether the death of the musician was accidental or a suicide, but the dead man's daughter, Irmgrade, today, stated her father had evidently been driven to take his own life by financial worries.

"My father had long been worried over finances," said the young woman. "He turned on the gas while alone and shortly after my mother had talked to him over the telephone. My mother returned last night to find an ambulance outside our door, and she has been in a serious condition since from the shock of finding father dead."

Koemmenich was born in Germany in 1866 and was appointed conducter of the Oratorio Society on June 5, 1912, succeeding Walter Damrosch, who had directed the organization for thirteen years.

CANADIANS ENTERTAINED

AT HOUSE OF COMMONS.
Norman Seagram's Canadian cricket team were entertained at dinner at the House of Commons by Sir Rowland Blades, M. P., who had invited a large company to meet them.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain proposing the health of the team, said there were man reasons which tempted some of them to become members of that august assembly—the House of Commonsbut the greatest was that they learnt so much when they had got there. He never should have known that cricket was played in Canada, or that a British team had visited Canada, or that Canadian teams had visited this country, had it not been that he was a member of the House of Commons. He was placed in a great difficulty. They had comparatively recently entertained cricketers from Finladelphia and from Australia, and on each occasion Sir Rowland Blades had suggested that he should propose their health. He had only one speech on cricket, and was embarrassed in making it a third time. Having obtained his acceptance to the dimer, Sir Rowland Blades had suggested that the should propose their health.
