The German Club has been the scene of many conferences between German officials and their German-American sympathizers since August, 1914, and its name was mentioned frequently in connection with the movements of German agents. Captain Karl Boy-Ed, the German naval attache who directed in perman naval attache who directed in permanents. Before long the heart gets weak, flutman naval attache who directed in person much of the unneutral activity of the German embassy, lived there, and from there wrote a number of his human morously deprecatory letters to the newspapers designed to create the impression that his activities were purely those of a scrupulously correct diplomatic official.

Another German official who lived there was Dr. Heinrich Albert, the financial agent of the German propaganda in this country, and it was while Dr. Albert was going home via the Sixth avenue elevated between Fiftieth and Fifty-eighth streets that he lost or had stolen from him the famous portfolio of papers whose publication led to the first detailed exposure of Germany's financing of all sorts of discreditable activities in the United States.
