"Laying aside every weight." For example, take the "weight" of strong drink. How many a man, how many had a successful ministry if he had laid aside the "weight" of strong drink.

Just let me give you one instance.
There was a company of clergymen might that Mr. Laurier's slate is to might that Mr. Laurier's slate is to might that Mr. Laurier's slate is to compete as it can be made until the government of the country is feally in the liberal hands. Your corresponding and nail against the fanaticism of tectotalers; and his paper was read by a very clever paper was read by a a minister of the gospel would have was silence, and on old ciergyman that no one had noticed, about eighty years old, who was sitting in a corner of the room, rose up and said: "My reverend brethren, I am a very old man, and I should like to say a few words to you. I once had a son. He was a noble boy, and to the age of twenty-one he never touched a drop of drink; but one day he was invited to dinner by a friend, and this friend persuaded my son to give up his pledge, by saying it was more manly to do what everybody else did, and to know when one had taken enough, and to know how to ried away by his friend's arguments, and began to take wine. A few years after that my son became a helpless drunkard; and oh, my reverend brethren, I laid my son in a drunkard's grave, and although I believe he truly turned to God a few months before he died, yet his constitution was so wrecked with drink that it was really the cause of his death; and my reverend brethrea"-and suddenly the man drew himself up as straight as possible, and fire flashed out of his eyes-"and my reverend brethren, the man that persuaded my son to break his pledge is that clergyman who has just read that paper to you. Oh, you murdered my son, sir, you murdered my son," and the old man sat down, in tears. I can tell you that that clever clergyman's paper hadn't much offect at that clerical meeting after that. So I say to you, "Know your own weakness, brother," and say "Oh, my God, Thou knowest that I dare not bring gun-powder near fire; oh, God, I am weak, and even if I am not weak, my brother is weak, and, oh Lord, help me to set a consistent example, lest I become the cause, even unwittingly, of my brother's destruction."

THE PRESIDENCY.

A Mass Meeting of Sound Money Advocates to be Held in Chicago

Chicago, July 2.-A counterfeit pre entment of President Grover Cleveland partially hides the large mirror before which the dusky but attractive Queen Lilliuokalani performed her morning toilet while in Chicago. The smiling face of Roswell P. Flower in crayon looks down from the top of the dresser and the royal coat of arms on the high mahogany bed was hidden tonight by an immense placard announcing that on Saturday night there will be a mass meeting of "sound money advocates." The room is one of the big parlors in the Palmer house, and one of the suite occupied by the foreign queen on her visit here. It is to be used as headquarters for the New York delegation, and is the same room occupied by the New Yorkers in 1888 when Cleveland was nominated. "There." said Sergeant-at-arms Leon Wager, as he placed a picture of Sena-tor Hill and one of Senator Murphy each side of the president, "that is the only picture of Mr. Cleveland that you will find in any of the headquarters," and this statement proved true. There is a great dearth of Cleveland's pictures here.

St. Johns, N. F., July 2.-The marin court of inquiry on the loss of the Capulet has censured the captain, but permitted him to retain his certificate. The customs revenue of the colony for the quarter ending June 30, was $402,000, against $282,000 for the same quarter last year, but only an average when compared with returns for sim ilar periods in the past five years.

GROSS CARELESSNESS.

Boston, July 2.-Three colored men named Joseph Duncan, 38; John Clark, 39, and George Willis, 66 years old, are held at the Lagrange street station on a charge of manslaughter. The men were moving furniture at 27 Ellott street this afternoon, and in lowering a bureau from a third story window a rope gave way, allowing the bureat to fall in the street below. It struck Edna Collins, a Carver street girl, 11 years old, causing a fracture of the skull, from which she died this evening. The police will attempt to show that the men were guilty of gross carelessness.
