Over many a rugged mile he must travel with his family and his sheep and oxen for sacrifice and his tent and provision for his journey, in order to perform his religious duties. There at Jerusalem was the temple. There he expected to meet God, or at least there God would be propitious. There was the priest who could offer his sacrifice and present his confession to God. There was the holy place and the most holy place, the locus of the Jewish worship. Even in far off lands when he worshipped, he turned his face toward the temple, as if his heart were there, in any case. Then, too, his daily devotions found expression in a most elaborate ceremonial. There were divers washings, as there were multifarious causes of uncleanness. There were tithings and Your child, learning to play the piano, offerings and burnt offerings and thank offerings and peace offerings, all associated with special localities and attended with infinite trouble to the worshipper. Again, in the perfect society there is no distinction between the reigious and the secular. Here we have our times and places of religion. We gather here in this house of prayer, believing that God is present here as He is not in other places, as, indeed, He has promised to be. It is God's conare apt to identify religion with the means of religion. Our worship here this morning is the means of religion, rather than religion itself. We get grace by our religious exercises to keep God's commandments in all our walks of life, and that is religion. The members of the church triumphant are equally religious every day of the week and every hour of the day, and, hence, church-going in our sense of the word, is forever abolished. In that society, one does not need to say to his brother "Know the Lord," for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. There is no more preaching, "no temple therein."

Once more; it is obvious that the more faithful and devoted we are to the means of religion here the sooner finds it hard labor to spell out note by note, conforming to the rules and rudiments of practice. By and by she will go beyond the rules. She will acquire the genius of the skilled performer. #### MANY FIRES IN CHATHAM.

The Town Alarmed by Incendiarism Aldermen Had a Hot Meeting.

CHATHAM, Sept. 13.—Chatham has been experiencing a carnival of fires and fire alarms, and within a fortnight has suffered from three fires and several alarms

On Sunday last an alarm was turned in at one o'clock in the morning. Investigation showed the fire to be in the east end, and the Glidden house, go of the religious instincts to God, near the lime-kiln, was totally destroyed. The house was an old one and unoccupied, and the Irving house, which was destroyed two weeks before, was also an unoccupied one. Another alarm was sounded this morning at a quarter to five o'clock, and the bright reflection showed it to have been started in the business section of the town. Those first upon the scene found a fiercely raging conflagration in rear of the Hoffman store, opposite the post office. Fire was observed in rear of the Creaghan store, lately vacated by meant the same when He said, "Make R. Flanagan, and there is no doubt but that it was a deliberate attempt to destroy the business part of the town. The fire was making rapid progress when discovered by a party returning And yet the text states a great by impulsion of love. "All the law is from some social event at Nelson, and residents of Lower Newcastle had seen the flames for fully an hour before an alarm was sounded in Chatham. Many citizens think the policeman who was supposed to be on duty should account for his whereabouts during the hour. All these three fires were of incendiary origin and people > ment without any attempt by those in authority to protect property. Another alarm was sounded at ten o'clock this morning, which was caused by an incipient fire at the Dominion house, opposite the town hall, and again at three this afternoon still another alarm was struck, which was occasioned by another slight outbreak at the same house. In each case the fire was extinguished without any trouble. The fire at Hoffman's was a difficult one to deal with owing to the congested condition of the buildings and the progress made by the fire before an alarm was given. No less than nine streams were playing on the fire at one time, and it is conceded by all that if the town had not had the efthe business part and much of the residential part of the town would have been swept. None of the buildings were completely destroyed.
