

THE PROMISES OF GOD.

BY REV. CHARLES J. SPURGEON.

Where are given even as exceeding great and precious promises...

They also exceed all expectation. He does for us exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think...

The promises exceed all measurement; there is an abyss of depth in them as in meaning a heaven of height in them as in excellence...

These men of God who have known the Lord for fifty or sixty years have never yet extracted the whole of the marrow from His promise...

How precious are the promises when we lie sick, gasping into eternity by the month together, sorely tried and tempest-tossed through gain and weariness...

How precious are the promises when we lie sick, gasping into eternity by the month together, sorely tried and tempest-tossed through gain and weariness...

How precious are the promises when we lie sick, gasping into eternity by the month together, sorely tried and tempest-tossed through gain and weariness...

How precious are the promises when we lie sick, gasping into eternity by the month together, sorely tried and tempest-tossed through gain and weariness...

How precious are the promises when we lie sick, gasping into eternity by the month together, sorely tried and tempest-tossed through gain and weariness...
