THE FOOLISH FROG. Not far from a fallen tree; He had nothing to do, Or his tasks were but few, And a merry young fellow was he.

Had a very bad fault, as you'll see He thought there was none 'Neath the broad shining sun Quite so wise and so cunning as he The frogs of the bog

Were to meet on the log
One evening, and this was the reason
They intended to hold—
So at least I was told concert, the first of the season Through the marshes all round There was none to be found So they asked him to go.

But the mother said, "No; He'll be safer with me in the bog." But he answered. "Dear me!" (He had, you will see, wisdom to lay on the shelf', I am now nearly grown!
"Twould be strange, you will own.
If I could not take care of myself."

So his head he put out, And looked slyly about, And said, as he met with no harm (More witty than wise,)
"I must say, with these eyes, And then he sprang out,
With a gay little shout,
And mounted the log with a spring,
And finding the band

He first cleared his throat, Then uttered a note
That rang through the silence profound;
And he thought all the while,
As he sang with a smile,
"I was brave to be first on the ground."

Although I was there, "I can't give the air,
Though I doubt not 'twas all very nice,
For a duck came along,
In the midst of the song, And gobbled him up in a trice

Now I think 'twould be wise For all little eyes remember 'tis often the case— There is danger at hand, Both by water and land, Though they may behold not a trace.

And it happens sometimes—
You may learn from these rhymes—
That, though we may think we are able
To keep out of harm,
There is "cause for alarm," As there was with the frog in the fable.

had increased immenslely in quanty This man lives in Chester. N. H., and a long, long time ago he found a woman weary and sick by the roadside, and took her into his house, where she found rest, food and shelter. The woman died late-ly and left her be ben actor $10,000. There is a curious episode in the po-itical campaign of Virginia. The con itution of the State renders any person stitution of the State renders any person ineligible to office who has fought a duel or "knowingly conveyed a challenge, or aided or assisted in any manner in fighting a duel." Now a country newspaper, the Bristol News, has unearthed the correspondence in an "affair of honor" which occurred in 1870, and in which Colonel Hughes, the present Republican candidate for Governor, was the bearer of a challenge. The question is, what is to be done?

Nearly everybody, probably, though that Mr. Keith, of Kingston, Mass., who drew the $100,000 prize in the Louisville drew the $100,000 prize in the Louisville lottery was a very lucky fellow. We expressed our doubts on that point at the tme and now have been confirmed. A Massachusetts paper says that he was a steady man of business before, and now has become visionary and unsettled. He is investing a considerable portion of his unearned gold in other lottery tickets, and his fellow townsmen have nearly all become infatuated on the same subject. In short, the chances are that Mr. Keith's supposed good luck will prove his ruin. The coroner's jury in the Kelsey case found a verdict to the effect that the remains found floating in Oyster Bay on the 29th of August are those of Charles G. Kelsey, and that he died from the effects of brutal treatment received at the hands of persons to the jury unkown; that Royal Sammis, George B. Banks, Arthur T. Eurd, W. J. Wood, John McKay and Henry R. Prime aided and abetted and countenanced the committal of the above outrage by their presence, and that Arthur M. Prime, Claudius B. Prime, S. H. Burgess, Rudolph Sammis and James McKay were accessories before the fact. Royal Sammis, Banks, Hurd, Wood, McKay, the Primes, Burgess and Rudolph Sammis will be arrested immediately. Arthur Prime is a fugitive from justice accused of perjury. mains found floating in Oyster Bay on the

If people weren't foolish, as they are, ere wouldn't be half so much romance world, so let us be thankful for in [the world, so let us be thankful for folly. Among the hills of Western Maryland there was an ardent pair of lovers, but she was foolish and given to firtirg, and he was foolish and given to jealousy, and so to prove that he was the greater fool of the two, he shot the maiden of his love. The wound was not fatal, and she recovered, but he was to be tried for an assault with intent to kill, and the two lately appeared together in court. After such convincing proofs of her lover's affection the maiden left off flirting and was devoted only to him. At last accounts they were awaiting the result of that trial, and if he should be sent to prison there would be still more opportunity for romance.

zine for girls and boys, appears with Nc-vember on its title page. The publishers vember on its title page. The publishers are Scribner & Co. New York and the subscription price is $3 per annum. This new candidate for the favor of the younger part of the reading public seems to have been born with a golden spoon in its mouth. The publishers have made it at the outset the handsomest magazine, typographically and pictorially, now printed. There are 30 articles and poems in this number, including a serial story of which three chapters are given. The best article is from the pen of Mr. Noah Brooks and is entitled "By the Sea." The quaint and pleasant old town by the sea is easily to be recognized at Castine, though "Fairport" is ostensibly the place written about. "The "larks" on Back Cove shores, and the fires of drift-wood in which savory little lunches of clams and mussells were cooked for hungry boy mouths are pleasantly described. The old wharves of Castine, and the many traditions of the quiet town, give Mr. Brooks good material for his sketch. The article is exquisitely illustrated.
