

LATIN AND GREEK GRAMMAR—HONORS.

PROFESSOR BOYS (Trinity), EXAMINER.

1. Give a list of Latin concessive conjunctions, marking those that require the subjunctive mood.
2. Give the significations of derivative nouns ending in culus, iades, artum, itas, crum.
3. State the various relations of one action to another that may be expressed by the Latin participle.
4. State the nature and construction of the gerund and gerundive.
5. Give the commonest forms of the conditional sentence in Latin.
6. Give the meanings of ἐπὶ with dat.; πρός with genit.; παρά with accusat.
7. State the uses of the Greek dative case, giving the equivalents for those that are expressed by some other case in Latin.
8. Give rules with regard to the attraction of the relative.
9. Give rules for moods in dependent clauses of oratio obliqua in Greek.
10. State the constructions of ὥστε, πρίν μὴ οὐ, and the distinction between οὐ βούλομαι οὐδένα ὄραν and οὐ βούλομαι μηδένα ὄραν.

LATIN AND GREEK COMPOSITION—HONORS.

PROFESSOR FLETCHER (Queen's), EXAMINER.

I.

Translate into Latin.

- (a) I do not wish the interests of so wicked a man as this to be consulted by any one.
- (b) If he had won the crown, he would have put all the good men in the country to the sword.
- (c) Born at Rome, he lived for sixty years at Corinth, and then, in his old age, went to the beautiful city of Marseilles in France, where he died.
- (d) When he had captured their stronghold, feeling that it was of the utmost consequence to all that the king should be apprised of the fact, he sent three horsemen to him with news of the capture.
- (e) He denied that there was any need of haste in the accomplishment of their plans. The enemy (he said) was more than three days' march away. Let them therefore make their intended preparations with calmness and go forth without hesitation to meet him in the field.

II.

Translate into Greek:

- (a) He thought that he should arrive at Athens within three days.
- (b) Let us ask him how many of the enemy were killed in that battle.
- (c) They knew that they had lost (ἀπώλλυμι) many more ships and men than we.