DR. OLIVER G. TIFFANY

Was born at Schoharie, N.Y. He was the nephew of Dr. Oliver Tiffany, whom his father joined at Ancaster, after the war of 1812. When his father settled here, Oliver G. was but a boy. He probably studied medicine with his uncle. He attended at Fairfield Medical College at the same time as did Dr. W. J. A. Case. In 1822, he passed the Medical Board. He engaged in practice with his uncle for a time, and then went to Chicago and was appointed surgeon to the hospital there. He never married, and died at a comparatively early age.

Dr. Frederick W. Tiffany, probably a relative of the above, and a brother of George S. Tiffany, of Hamilton, died, February 3, 1842, aged 31.

DR. JOHN E. TIMS,

A native of Ireland, passed the Medical Board, January, 1828. He practised in York and became well known as a politician. Was Vice-President of the "Toronto Political Union Society," and was to some extent involved in the Mackenzie rebellion of 1837. He represented St. Patrick's ward as alderman in the first year of the incorporation of the city, 1834, being elected in place of Dr. John Rolph, who had declined to act after his election. He died, October 4, 1839, in the prime of his life.
