

I have a message of hope and good cheer, of encouragement and inspiration to every suffering woman. I have endured the torture due to female troubles and the consequent despondency and mental agony almost to the point of despair, and I have been restored from this condition to a state of vigorous health, and to the happy, exhilarating frame of mind which accompanies physical well being. This change has been brought about wholly by the use of ORANGE LILY.

In addition I have had the privilege and pleasure of inducing multitudes of other suffering women to give ORANGE LILY a trial, and have received thousands of enthusiastic acknowledgments of the blessings it has brought to them. The following is a sample:

Truro, N. S., April 5, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—Your very kind letter was received yesterday. In reply to your question about my health, I am thankful to say that I am very well. As I have never given you a statement of my case you may be interested in it.

For several years I have suffered untold agony. This suffering was continuous, but I would have violent attacks every few weeks, each attack lasting several days. The first Sunday in November, I felt the pain increasing and so did not go to prayers. The rest of the family did go, and soon after the forcing down pains selzed me and I had to remain on the floor until their return. I was in great pain all night and was very sick for a whole week.

Then Mrs. L. came to see me and told me of your wonderful medicine. I got my husband to send for it right away, as I was too sick to write myself. (My doctor could do nothing for me.) I have used 5 boxes of ORANGE LILY, have had three months of good rest, and am now well, never better in my life. I have had three months of good rest, and am now well, never better in my life. I have had the eld pains since. I often ask my husband if it is myself that is going not had the old pains since. I often ask my husband if it is praise. Your friend, MRS. E. H. F.

Receiving, as I do, dozens of such reports each day, I feel impelled to make known to my suffering sisters the merits of ORANGE LILY. It differs from known to my suffering sisters the merits of ORANGE LILY. It differs from known to my suffering sisters the merits of ORANGE LILY. It differs from known to my suffering sisters the merits of ORANGE LILY. It differs from the so-called remedies in that it is not taken internally. It is a strictly local treatment, and is applied directly to the affected organs. Its curative elements are absorbed into the congested tissues, expelling the stagnant foreign matter are absorbed into the congested tissues, expelling the stagnant foreign matter in gel is a positive, scientific remedy and even if you use no more than the Free Trial treatment you will be very materially benefited.

for work, and every night he returned home tired and discouraged. They kept constant watch of the "Help Wanted" columns of the papers, but to no avail. They were almost reduced to their last crust, and the father, mother and little Flora were constantly looking for work.

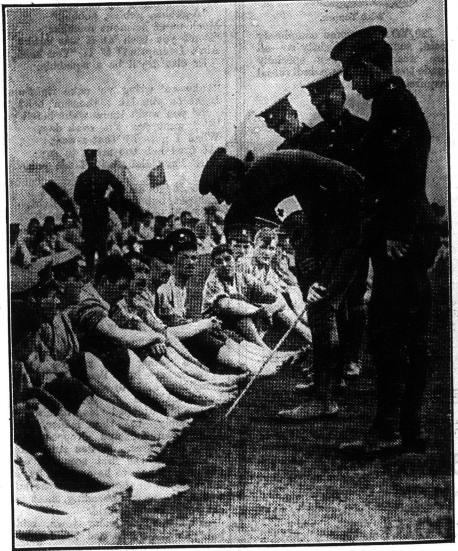

One morning Flora saw an advertisement in the paper for a cash girl. Before the store doors were opened the child was at the place and at the head of the line of applicants. It was near the holidays; the firm needed more help; the child won favor with the manager and was taken on. She fulfilled all her duties conscientiously and well, but when the "rush" was over she, with the other "extras," was dismissed. Her little heart was nearly broken, for she knew, far, far better, than the manager what the pitiful two dollars a week, which she had been paid for her labor, meant to her family.

The old gentleman who was at the head of the firm of dry goods merchants where Flora had worked, although he was a very rich man, went every day to his business, and took a fatherly interest in an his employes. He had noticed the bright little "extra" cash girl,

The child hung down her head, enervously picked at her dress a moment, and then, as if she had made up her mind to cast aside her cowardly shame, she raised her big brown eyes to the senior's gaze, and said:
"I'll tell you sir,—I'll tell you all about it. You see, my papa goes out of the house every morning, and walks and walks, but he never finds any work. Then he comes home at night; and when mamma knows that he couldn't find a job, she cries. Then, when papa sees her crying, he cries. Then I get crying, too-because, you see, we have nothing to eat. When I was here working for you, the salesladies-lots of them brought their lunch. They had more than they could eat, and they used to wudge it up in a paper and throw it away. Quick as a little mouse, when nobody saw me, I gathered up all these scraps, put them together in my little basket, so then my papa and mamma, had supper. Oh, please, sir, do let me come back to work, so I needn't see my papa cry!"

The old man turned away to hide his own tears. A moment later he put his hand on the noble child's head, as if to

A few days after Flora had been told that they would not need her longer, she went to the dry goods store and sought out the old senior, to whom

I wish you would let "Mr. Mme come back here and work for you. I will always be here on time; I will his own employ. She will be promoted do all that I am told, and I will work for nothing."

The old man was more than surprised. Her honest, earnest little face forbade him thinking evil of her; but if she was willing to work so hard for nothing, there must be something behind it. What could it be He began to question her. She told him that her father could get no work. In fact, she told him all: the closing of the gasfixture factory, the loss of the money by the failure of the savings bank, and finished by saying that she wanted to work for him that she might help her father and mother.

"Confusion worse confounded," thought the old man. Then he said: "But, my little girl if you are willling to work for me for nothing. I cannot see how that would be helping your father and mother any."

This is the true story of how a good brave little girl kept the wolf of hunger from her father's door. Her noble conduct has won for her the respect and friendly interest of an influential as well as a truly good man.

The Musical Top.

Joseph Harworth, the actor, had in his possession, a small red musical top, which would not bring more than a few cents if offered for sale, but which to him had a value far beyond its cost, for it was a unique momento of his friendship with John McCullough.
